Subject: {Req} Tools for Skinning

Are there any tools that can be used to make skins other than Photoshop and similar? I would like to try skinning but I can't buy any image software. Perhaps there's a freeware-type image editor that can do the job half-decently?

I use Paint.NET for all my graphics work. Though, I still suck at graphics, lol.

http://getpaint.net

It's free as well.

Also you could try http://www.splashup.com/ or use the GIMP there is a tut on renhelp to use it, but i recommend getting an older version of the gimp cuz it looks more like photoshop but try the new one as well. also it's light weight.

It means you don't have the GIMP plugin required to open .dds files. Basically it has no idea what the fuck is going on and had an anxiety attack.

Oh, wait, I thought he didn't have the .dds plugin. It gives errors like that when you don't, but I guess he does after reading the error message again.

Does it need anything extra to edit dds files and such like? Or any special instructions I should know about?

Or do I just roll with it, see what comes out i don't think it can read dds i think you should find a dds tga converter (standalone)

Errr: http://paintdotnet.forumer.com/viewtopic.php?f=16&t=1637

It's built into version 3.10+

PS. I use Photoshop Elements 5 for my skins
