I hope people realize that you probably chose the fastest link nearest to your location, which doesn't actually mean you'll ever hit your max speed through the actual internet. For example, Europe's infrastructure is destroying North America's and so if anyone in Europe attempts to download from a North American server odds are they'll never hit their top speed. It definitely is a bonus and awesome to have a large pipe going to your location though that's for sure if you plan on doing some epic multi downloading/data transferring.

I wish Cable in North America provided useful upload speeds, unfortunately, it isn't the case.
