For those of you who don't use Firefox or haven't Checked for updates recently(like this morning), Firefox 3.5 is out!

The major feature imo is "Open Video" which lets you view a video without an add-on or plugin.

Take a look at the "What's New in Firefox 3.5" video:
http://www.mozilla.com/en-US/firefox/video/?video=whatnew-3.5

Release notes: http://www.mozilla.com/en-US/firefox/3.5/releasenotes/

Thoughts and opinions?

It still uses alot but clearly less than before. With ~10 tabs open with music, pictures, renegadeforum posts, google, security cam and more it uses a bit below 250mb

Great, I wonder if I will still have to use the "browser.cache.memory.enable" set to false, in order to prevent Firefox from using 100% CPU resources while watching on-line videos. Or if I can finally set it to true like it was by default.

Internet Explorer 6 for the picking up of viruses?

I wonder if 3.5 will improve my browsing speeds, or whether the issue is still my ISP...

Probably my ISP.

3.5 makes things faster.
