Crimson and the moderators took some time to update the rules of conduct. Please read the updated version here.

If you have any questions, then ask them in this topic.

Thanks .

Finally.

Yeah, we knew we had to change the policy on that, but we didn't know what to, and therefore we had to discuss before we could act, and that got silly...

Anyway, READ THEM!

exofail still remains 'creatively edited' ?

Not to mention PM access getting taken away for no reason. And deleted threads

Neither Goztow nor I have access to the word filter.

I do not have the required access to PM control, and what is done by the administration is not my fault.

Contact Crimson.

Has the warez rule been changed at all? I'm still not 100% sure whether it's supposed to cover the NON-cracked Renegade ISOs that Blazer posted a link to somewhere on the forum.

The rule didn't change, there's some kind of tolerance towards those ISO's.

And the censoring concerns swearing. AFAIK the word that's auto replaced there is not a swearword. And as Caveman is also right.

Quote: Advertising: forum members can advertise their Renegade or Command and Conquer related community, clan or business via a small line in their signature.

They are not able to do so because of the word being censored.

I think it could be used no problem in a signature, but my issue is that what happens when say, another community does something deemed 'terrible' by the higher ups? Will Jelly become 'Faily'? Will n00bless become 'n00bfull'?

It's one thing to censor out cheats or things that are actually debilitating towards the game, but this is just pettiness.

How ironic, I see no such thing!

In response to some minor confusion, I clarified the signature size rules, hence the further update.
