I got my A-level results today.

I managed a B in maths and a D in geography.....it's got me into Staffordshire University to do a degree in computer games programming

If anyone else was getting results, what did you get and what you gonna do with them?

C4 was a U?! I understand that paper was nasty (it's my lowest of the modules), but 100% on the others either says you forgot the binomial theorem and hate vectors, or ?!

Thing with me, you give me an ok paper... I perform to my potential..

You give me a hard paper... or something completely different to the past papers that i prepared for. I get all stressed out and perform even worse than i normally would on that paper.

In real life i would just take a 'time out' and come back to it later prepared... but you cant do that in an exam

Sucks really :/ I cant exactly go around blameing the exam on me failing the paper can i? UMS is meant to account for that, just dousnt really help me lol

In real life, you'd just take your time, some of those problems need more time given to them, the entire method of examinations is flawed, but I'm at a loss for a substitute.

Nice on the c1 c2 and c3.....unlucky about c4, although that was a really hard test.

I only got 50% so only managed a D, which will have been my worst one out of all of them.

If i got better on C4 i'd have managed an A....not sure how many points i was from it though.

I got 449/600 in the end.....what did you need for an A (i'd cry if it was 450).

You need 480 for an A

440 for a B

I got 479

Ouch.....in that case, i was 9 marks into the boundary for maths....which, incidentally, i was only 8 marks into the boundary for geography.

Ah well, i got into uni, so i'm happy.
