Just wanted to make a thread to discuss the prize.

Quote:

n00bstories has generously donated $200 worth of cash prizes!!! 1st place will receive $100. 2nd place will receive $60. 3rd place will receive $40.

NE has decided to contribute its 3rd place prize money back into the community. We'd like to donate $20 to Atomix and $20 to Exodus to support their servers and help with their payments. I just need the leaders from each of the two communities to make a post here to confirm this. I also give permission to the RGCT leaders to give the prize directly to these two communities rather than giving it to me.

Thanks again to n00bstories for your generous donation & best of luck to the organizers.

I'll be sending the money to the leader of the community who won. What you decide to do with it is up to you, whether that's buying gifts for your own community members, paying your server bills, donating it to a charity at Christmastime, or donating it to other people who are struggling to pay their bills. My business is booming and since we were unable to put together a team at the time this tournament started, I decided to contribute to the tournament in another way. Both by hosting the forum for it and by contributing cash prizes.

I'm pretty sure she said she would be sending it to the winner, not who the winner deferred the payment to.

I can understand that, what if the winners said that wanted 100 seperate payments made of a buck to different people. That would be pretty annoying to have to administrate... Plus, I guess it would sting a little for Crimson handing money over to Exodus (a point that was no doubt not lost on anyone when they made there decision to split the money).

I don't really care about that. However, it seems quite rude to ask me to go through the hassles of divvying up the prize I donated to multiple recipients.

Well unless I'm confused Jelly and CW are playing for the trophy. So that means that either the community leader of Jelly or CW will be receiving the prize money pending on the outcome (should be a good series btw - go CW). Neither of which is Fobby. I'm sorry if I don't get the point of redirecting prize money to teams who lost the tournament. I also don't get the point of redirecting prize money to people who don't need it or are already planning on shutting down. I would have thought if you didn't want the money that you could donate it to a worthwhile cause for the holidays, like starving people, cancer research, etc.

Let me know when you have a paypal address for me to send it to. Since you, Fobby, were the one listed in the tournament as the representation for your team, I don't mind transferring it to your personal account.

I'm not aware that either exodus or atomix are being shutdown soon, that's some news to me. Anyway, even if that was the case, his money would help keeping them alive. But what's the point of giving a money prize and then questioning the way the winner is going to spend them? You could have given those money to charity yourself instead of funding a renegade tournament, if you'd really care about that.

I'm sorry but I can't stand to see Fobby being questioned about how he's going to spend his prize, after the generosity he has shown.

We just wanted to reinvest the money into the community that we love. [NE] Public Warzone shutdown years ago, and splitting the money five ways to the NE's that played the most is only 8 bucks per player, so the clan has no use for the money. The servers our members play on are Exodus and Atomix, mostly due to the numbers and lack of really crazy mods.

The decision wasn't any more complex than that: we'd like to help the servers we play on. The point wasn't that they had lost the tournament; in fact we had made the decision before checking to see if they were in the tournament.

2 people can be online at the same time with same serial... I was doing it a few hours ago. I have had 3 people online with my serial.

As for the second comment... looking for "glitches" that sounds like some good fair gameplay, especially to use in cw.

Thirdly, I think there is a way to find your serial on your pc.

For Windows users, go to Start, and then Run. Type in regedit and click OK. The registry will open. Search for the game's title (ctrl - f). Hit F3 to continue the search if the title doesn't show up on the first page. If you look in the data column, you may see a long string of numbers and letters that looks like a serial number. Write it down and save it.

Google pwns, worked for me. You may have to use f3 several times, the name of the folder should be Serial.

I also don't get the point of redirecting prize money to people who don't need it or are already planning on shutting down. I would have thought if you didn't want the money that you could donate it to a worthwhile cause for the holidays, like starving people, cancer research, etc.

Atomix is shutting down?

No, we're not. This is news to us, so I'm not sure where it's come from.

That's not what I've heard but who knows where rumors get started.

I'm not sure, this is where the said rumours get continued though. You can disregard whatever you've heard, as we have had no plans to shut down the community.

So long as the community donations keep coming in while your leader pursues his vendetta for one person at the cost of the community you mean.

Panties in a bunch much? Why you flaming kid.

I could care less actually. I'm just contributing to the conversation. I don't know how you perceived anger of that.

Unless you're somehow involved in the inner workings of our community without my knowledge, you cannot possibly know what sort of state we're in. It was my intention to quickly dismiss an incorrect rumour that surfaced in this thread, no more. Please do not take that as an opportunity to create more.

Google pwns, worked for me. You may have to use f3 several times, the name of the folder should be Serial.

At what point in this thread was I angry? I'm just calling the situation as it is. There are very few things on the internet that I'm angry at - none of them are here I can tell you that.

The funds have been sent to the address I was given. The slap in the face of a prize I did not have to give will not be forgotten.

If you want to salvage any sense of your own dignity and respect, I suggest donating here for goodwill to a noble cause for the Christmas holiday.

Me neither. Though for the record, I do donate to charities with my own money, but the prize money for NE in a Renegade tournament has been decided to stay within the Renegade community servers that we play on (Atomix and Exodus). I'm sure if any other community won, they would put their money into servers or contests as well. We didn't mean to offend anyone, as I barely know much about any of these community wars.

I concur with Fobby. I think that the best use of the money is to put it back into the renegade community, and the way to do that is funding its servers. I can't think of a better way to spend the prize money tbh, and I don't think he should be criticized for an act of generosity.

OK, you know that's not true. Fortunately, everyone can see your deliberate slap in the face. I would have willingly paid Exodus if they had won prize money but they lost twice and were eliminated at the lowest possible level of the tournament and yet you feel they should get prize money anyway. Clearly you did this as a personal insult to me because of my opinion about your mod. Very mature. Be proud of yourself. You have the money, do whatever you want with it.

What is with your assumptions? I honestly have not kept track of any of this n00bstories/exodus nonsense. I'm a university student, I had a job, and I spend my free time working with a couple mods. I don't know the first thing about what had happened between you and them, and the sole reason why any money was given to them was because I like their server. Good ping, good playercounts (I like medium-sized games), and I haven't had any problems with moderators. It's not about taking your money and giving it to them, it's about NE giving back to the communities we've played countless hours with. Heck, I'm not even the one that came up with the idea of donating back to the community.

I don't know you Crimson. I've never had a single conversation with you on this forum, or ingame, or on MSN, IRC, Teamspeak, anywhere. I haven't played on n00bstories when I was still an avid player of C&C Renegade due to my former PC failing at playing big games. Hence why I'd be at Atomix mostly, and Exodus secondarily.

I really think you were generous for donating to this tournament; I don't have any problems with you. If you ever had problems with our mod I do not recall, nor do I really care, as there will always be critics of anything. I don't hold any formal opinions on you as I do not know you. Stop making assumptions about me, because you do not know me.

Way to take that out of context. My thread is about putting our prize money into two Renegade servers. Explaining how I came to that decision in reply to a criticism on my own thread is not what CarrierII is talking about. He's talking about the useless bickering.

But if you'd really like to ban me, go ahead. If an admin were to really do that, then I wouldn't want to associate with them or their forum at all.

I just think it is great. I want to thank Fobby for his generous contribution to our server. It will help for a Christmas Special to help increase numbers.

I would also like to thank Crimson for her payment and donation to the RGCT.

It is good to see that bygones are bygones and we have all moved on.

If anyone else wants to donate to Exodus we would be more than happy to accept donations. We are developing and growing and love the Renegade X mod.
