Interesting... I don't get the popup because NoScript blocks the scripting from that subdomain. Looks like someone hacked the site and injected some JavaScript code to offer that download.

Firefox has made this page really ugly, it wont download anything from here. Strange seeing everything just white lol.

Hope this gets fixed soon.

I think the bad code has been removed by now, as my noscript no longer seems to block that referral. But it might take a while before google becomes aware of this.

Looks like Google caught up, I just got in without having to wade through 'Reported Attack Site' warnings.

Yeah, it just takes time for Google to respond to my "review" request and take that block off. Last time, I deleted all the evidence so Blazer couldn't figure out how they got in. This time, I let him look before I fixed anything and he took steps to block the exploit (unrelated to the FUD software).
