nintendo announced a new version of ds some while ago.

<http://uk.ds.ign.com/articles/107/1079233p1.html>

the new device would be capable of doing things like this:

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pWYgM1RGixM>

I am planning to buy a dsi these days but idk if I wait for the new one (at least for 6 months) or just buy the dsi. I dont want to buy two handhelds in a year though. It would be waste of money. what do you think?

In my opinion all of this 3D stuff (3D TVs, 3D consoles, etc) is a load of BS, sure I have no doubts they are able to do it but I just don't care at all about it. I'm just going to stick with my trusty DSi tyvm.

Though that's just my opinion, I'm sure someone is going to come around and say "ZOMG! BUT IT'S 3D!" and tell you to buy, I will not.

P.S. Sorry for any typos in this message, I'm using my DSi to write it.

Interesting, but it'll only really matter if developers produce quality software for it. 90% of the games on DS/Wii right now are pure shit.

Yes, I heard about this awhile ago. Seems even before Nintendo releases the DSXL or whatever it's called, they already announce a new one. The only way I would get a 3DS is if it played GBA games, otherwise I'll just get a DS Lite if I ever decide to buy any of the models.

You are mistaken. That's not the 3DS. That's a DSi game. It's using the camera to simulate a 3D environment.

That game is called Hidden Messages, it's a Japanese DSi game.

You, too, are mistaken. The DS has the best titles available for a handheld. I'd go as far to say best titles period. (But since you can't really put DS games on consoles, it really isn't a contest)

The DS simply has the best game library... ever. It is by far my largest collection of games.

lol name some non-anime based games that normal people might like ... i've had my DS since launch (bulky silver one) and only have 5 games i've ever liked ... mario party DS, mario kart DS, metroid prime hunters, legend of zelda phantom hourglass and new super mario bros, ... quite a collection ... every other game i played was worth maybe 2-3 dollars.

Quote:lol name some non-anime based games that normal people might like Define "normal people." Also, they aren't 'anime-based' because then they would take after an anime. There are a few anime based DS games, but they usually aren't that good.

But I think I know what games you are talking about: Games with characters that look like they belong in an anime, correct?

It's funny how you put it and it's made even more funnier after you listed those games because you contradict yourself. Mario, Zelda, Metroid. Those are all "anime-esque" type games. You know, the kind you said "normal people" don't play?

You should play more of those types of games, you might actually enjoy it. A lot of them are very long, have an excellent story, addictive gameplay, and great game mechanics.

Personally, I really didn't like New Super Mario Bros, Metroid Prime Hunters, or Mario Party DS. Mario Kart was also kind of boring, but I played it when I had nothing else to do. Plus it can be fun over WiFi and in groups of 3 or more friends.

I still haven't beaten Phantom Hourglass yet. Don't get me wrong, I love Zelda games, but the thing about Phantom Hourglass is that it forces you to do the same exact dungeon over and over again. It's boring and repetitive. Whenever I get up to it again, I usually stop playing for a month or two before I decide to try it again. I hear Spirit Tracks follows a similar mechanic but they fixed it so you don't have to fight the same enemies and redo the same puzzles. (When you solve something, it is solved) So, I'm looking forward to playing that after I beat Phantom Hourglass.

Please quote the part of my response where I apparently "got all upset and ignored the point of your post."

Some recommendations? That's kind of hard given your previous statement about 'non anime games that normal people would like.' That was the point of my last post.

You see, the only game that I own and can think of that didn't come from Japan is Guitar Hero On Tour. I would have also suggested some games like Track Mania, Ridge Racer, Polarium, Animal Crossing, Tetris, etc... but they all come from Japan.

Besides, plenty of people like Zelda, and Zelda is quite anime-y. Same with Sonic.

I don't see why it's necessarily bad to have a game being anime-ish in style. You're just being an uptight faggot for automatically hating anything remotely Japanese in style.

If you're going to be an artfag about it, then fine. But facial expressions don't tell a story.

The game is, on average, 80 hours long. I bought it back in 08, used, at Gamestop because I heard a lot of good things about it. It is, imo, one of my most favorite single player games. Look past the art style and the ^_^ (whatever that means) and you might find the story interesting.

I actually will admit, I fucking hate lazy art in videogames, Japan or otherwise. But then, art in Japan has been lazy altogether lately anyways... alot of characters from anything are practically copy and paste these days.

also, Tales of Symphonia is a JRPG. wrong place to look for a game that doesn't have some form of moeshit.
