I've never really been a fan of "hardcore" stuff. It just never fit me.

Since you seem to know more about electronic music than myself, what genre would you say this falls under?

Cuz if you could make a mix with similar music, that'd be fantastic.

That's electro. I guess you'll like daft punk and darude and such as well.

Btw, Daft punk - Around the world vid clip is taken in one shot, no special effects o.0

Edit:

@Di3HardNL: I've heard better, nofi, but the bpm changes too much in not so fluent ways. Also, I got the feeling the volume changes. This might be because of the source tracks you used, but I found it to be annoying. One more thing that disburbs me as well, for hardcore there are too many breakdowns. While I can see why you did that in this case (it being a fanmix, you probably wanted to have a lot of tracks in it, right?) I feel it doesn't do the music justice.

Besides these pretty smaal things I think you mixed it in quite well, chosen the right moments and such.

Oh, one more thing, if you want to be correct, this isn't Gabber, no way.

Sorry, have listed enough of this music myself a few years back. Although I gotta admit that I was at Headhunters the 5th of may. I also visited DefQon1 in 2008.

The latest big epic thing I went to was probably Ministry of Sound New Years Evening in the O2 Arena in London. I recently started to go more to local (techno) events. I prefer the smaller rooms, and not having to fight your way through 100's of people when you go to get a drink or have to pee.

Tbh with you mate, It's not my thing. I prefer music you can shuffle to (not all of it), but I can't say whether it's good or not. But from memory this music sounds similar to the stuff that DJ was playing when you stripped to Lady Gaga.

I got all these tracks from one big album, the volume should be the same.

If you know what kind of software I used for this you'll understand why sometimes it sounds fucked up.

Its just a cut and paste program, only things you can adjust is volume, pan and rate

But I try my best, and I love making it though.

lol, you still put way too many tracks in a way too short mix. 7 tracks in a set shorter then 10 min is just stupid. Every track should play at least around 3 minutes...

Hitmen, that tracklist is insane, DL link please...

I'm more into Drum and Bass than Hardcore, but as Hitman knows - I'm not that fussed what type of electronic music I listen too.

Hitman, that Ras Kass Effect was one of the best tracks you sent me.
