Play cleanly. Naturally no cheating. We play with clanwars settings, which means we don't want clearscope / advantage skins.

Listen to Spoony (or we lose).

That's about all.

Game settings are also clanwars, so 0 starting credits.

Listen to Spoony.

Herr Surth wrote on Sun, 29 August 2010 04:39hey dover, give me newbie tips for sc:bw and sc2

1) The mistake a lot of newer players make is not making enough workers. This is especially true of ex-WarCraft 3 players who are used to only having to make like 5 guys to mine gold and another 5 for lumber. Optimal numbers per base are:

-In Brood War you want a little over 2 guys per mineral patch (8 patches per mineral line is normal) and 3 in your 1 gas geyser, coming out to about 19-20 per base.

-In StarCraft 2 you want 2.5-3 guys per mineral patch (Again, 8 patches is standard) and 3 on both your gas geysers for a total of about 30.

When you have that many workers per base, it's known as "saturated". It's okay and even encouraged to build workers past saturation, especially on your first base, since you can easily move the excess over when you expand to get new bases running at peak efficiency faster. One simple rule often told to the bottom of the bottom players to help them improve is "Never ever stop building workers". Of course, you'll want to stop eventually, having over 70 workers eats into your max army quite a bit, but the rule is good enough and simple enough to be a good newbie tip.

tl;dr -- Make lots of workers.

2) The next mistake that a lot of newer players make, once they've made their lot of workers, is that they don't spend their newfound income. Money in the bank is money that isn't working for you. Next time you lose a match or a big battle, take a look at what your money looks like. If you have 1000 minerals stockpiled, that's 20 marines you could have had. Often times I'll see players with 4k+ stockpiled because they're too busy trying to dance their reapers around or do some other cute micro. That isn't going to be as good as having all those potential units that they have out on the battlefield. If your barracks or gateways are working at peak efficiency and your money is still climbing higher, throw down more unit producing structures. If you have a large army and control the map, use those extra funds to take another base and expand your income even more. Spend money on upgrades whenever you can afford them and whenever they are useful (Or rather, will be useful, since they take 2+ minutes to finish).

tl;dr -- Spend your money. Keep it as closed to 0 as possible.

3) This kind of ties in with #2, but you should avoid queuing up a ton of units out of your unit producing structures. It ties up money that can be used more efficiently elsewhere. If you queue up 5 reapers at a barracks and they take 40 seconds each to build, you won't see the full return on your investment until 200 seconds later, and that's a lifetime in StarCraft matches. Avoid the temptation to queue up units as a way to make producing units easier, and train yourself to order unit production at one "wave" at a time. Avoid queuing up units to get your money closer to 0 to satisfy tip #2. That is false efficiency and will not help you very much at all.

tl;dr -- Don't queue.

Together, these three concepts are known as "macro", and it's the largest single factor between a bronze/silver player and a low-Diamond player. You don't even need any kind of brilliant strategy to climb the ladder as long as you're optimizing your income and just making a lot of shit. The strategizing comes later, but since you're asking for newbie tips, don't worry about that yet.

The last tip I can give you is to watch the minimap. Other than your money/supply counters, it's arguably the most important part of the screen. You'll find that things like surprise drops and nydus worms are a lot easier to deal with when you see them before all your workers start dying.

Right. Part of that has to do with WrCraft 3's food and upkeep system which discouraged getting more than a control group or two of units at a time. Part of it is that StarCraft is a faster-paced game, and any given individual unit can die much faster than in WarCraft 3, where you have 1k hp heroes keeping your guys alive.

Micro still matters in StarCraft, things like stimming or blinking at the proper moment can still have just as huge of an effect on the outcome of a battle as using your Talon Druids to cyclone key enemy units, but they certainly won't matter if you're facing an army three times the size of yours.

Herr Surth wrote on Sun, 29 August 2010 14:04ps: medics could stack their heal in scbw couldnt they? feels like a lot more of my marines die in sc2

It's always been one medic per unit. If you're having your marines die a lot, try skewing your composition slightly in favor of more medics vs more marines if you feel you have too few. Or, even more simply, just engage with a larger force in general.

Hi, just popping into say that if Troop had Downs Syndrome, he'd be nice to other people (Downs typically produces kind, loving personalities, but with slightly less "traditional" intelligence.)

Whilst we're on the topic, autosomal chromosome non-disjunction is pretty much the coolest phrase in biology (Except possibly rough endoplasmic reticulum).

</Biology lesson>

It's more likely Troop is just an epic troll. I return to my original suggestion of having him added to people's ignore lists by default.

I know there is some sort of point behind posting this. I'm just yet to figure out why.

Quote:spoony is one of the best people at leading in the history of this game
I'd go as far as saying he is the best leader in Renegade. Renegade generally has more followers than leaders anyway. I agree with troop that Spoony also rages a lot at his team if they don't do everything and anything on the dot; whether he tells them to or not, though. I'd rather have him on my team then with Jelly though.

I either have to start smurfing again, or convincing people im new....otherwise kids like Goztow, anthrax, argathal and others who don't even play this game will just keep talking shit on forums, but will dip as soon as I join the same server.

I have to go to a barbecue tomorrow. However, I'm not yet quite sure on how the times match up... so there might still be hope for me to join.

Since I don't want to screw up any strategies you might come up with, don't expect me to attend. If I can make it, I'll join in as like.. a reinforcement or something... but if I can't, then I wont.

My point was in games like these he's better because it's all he does (Sakura/LightTank tryhard) but 1v1 I could say we both would beat him. You should ask him.

Edit: I'm pretty sure I've been around long enough to see you try

I did. He said no. I believe you in that though, seeing how in those games my fps would have averaged 25-30, making it impossible for me to hit anything. 1v1 snipe is where i shine though, because my fps stays stable. PM me and we should get a quick 1v1 open game going

Also when you putting your WaR snipe server up I can't play at I337 because I lag like I'm on dial-up so sniper servers are out for me.

I don't know what else a "tryhard" would be, other than someone who tries hard, ie putting effort into what they're doing. And you followed that with a " " showing your displeasure at people working toward their goals.

I knew I sucked since I haven't played at least a couple of years. But having played other, better games and coming back to this crap, I can see why I stopped playing it after I outgrew the age of 14.

I suck at StarCraft 1 (By StarCraft 1 standards), too, but that game oozes quality out of every pore. Renegade just feels like the unfinished abandoned stepchild that it actually is.

Hate does suck, I was dumb enough to play him 1v1 snipe a few times.. kid clearly plays too much, so what Hate, you're good with one gun in a server with tons of gayass rules, get over yourself retard

Has the balls to talk so much shit to me, then leaves/gives up when he loses one med in a real 1v1.. give me a break, notice how there's shitloads of people that can snipe? Who can really compete in AOW games? Maybe 10 people these days, not to mention in a real game there aren't gay rules like hugging, looping. If you (Hate) snipe anyone that's a good cw sniper you'll get abused and hugged by a light tank/med sak combo, or raped by an orca/apachee everytime. You are not good.

And if we played an infrantry battle on any tunnel maps, i'd beat you on points badly with cheaper infrantry.. 500 sniper is one of the most useless characters in the game. Just lose the ego

I like how Karmai says i suck after i beat him, when he came and asked me for the 1v1 snipe in the first place. 2.0+ k/d 1v1 open sniping is pretty good for a 20 minute game in my opinion. I know I'm not good at small game aow against real opponents...it's not fun to me, so i never do it, and therefore have less experience in it. So yes Karmai, good job in beating me in something i never do. You happen to be in a sniper server just as much as me now-a-days, and still blow at it. That has to suck.

Blacky's still mad that me and RuF won against him and Xv due to him sucking. Shall i dig up that ss? Xv is one of the best open snipers ever in Renegade, and you still managed to lose with him on your team. If i left because you were hugging, it was because it was an open server where you moderated and were abusing. I'm not going to waste my time with a retard like you..

1 vs 1 snipe anytime. Yea when i played with xv i was super toasted and maybe got like 10 kills. Xv rage quieted before game even ended.

Ruf meaning ruflez because you didn't play with ruflez he was going to play with xv i joined before he did and ruined the game because Im that awesome. I was on teamspeak with ruflez and xv.
