Did anything ever really happen with Renegade X? I remember the videos always looked cool.

Can anyone fill me in with the details?

I don't care if this sounds biased but I think it is so good that it will replace Renegade. Have you played it yet? It has to be the best remake of renegade ever but with more features and beter graphics.

Yes. It has had a few releases already and is in a perfectly playable condition. It is very fun to play, but you have to find the right server or else the lag will take away from the experience.

Here is their website:
<http://www.renegade-x.com/site/>

Version .55 is out now and that requires Unreal Tournament 3 if you want to play Renegade X. However, in a couple months, Renegade X: Black Dawn will be released, which is a stand-alone single player mission for the game that doesn't require UT3 to be installed.

All releases of Renegade X after Black Dawn will not require UT3 to be installed.

Because it's on the way to making the multiplayer portion stand alone.

Everything that's being made for the single player is going to be put into the multiplayer, even the AI bots. So the choices are to:

A. Wait a year and a half for a multiplayer release

B. Get a single player demo release mid way to keep you busy until the multiplayer patch is ready.

Basically making the single player demo is the BEST idea they can do. They aren't wasting time doing it because all of the content has to be made anyway, so why not give fans something to do while they wait?

Wow! I wasn't expecting someone to fly off the handle like that. It's okay, bro - chill. I didn't say anything remotely threatening or argumentative. Adding apostrophes in random places has been a pet peeve of mine... We call that progress, adaptation and self-control. :3

But yeah, DA (perhaps you want me to spell it D.A.?) is Deviant Art.

I've only been for three years.

Yes I [truly] woke up when I saw what the government was doing in 08.

I've always had tendencies in the past but I had to expose myself to the wisdom of Friedman, Hayek and... Well, any well-known libertarian you can think of to fully embrace the concept of liberty and what it brings to the table.

Earlier last year I had more extremist views, but then I realized that extremists don't get anywhere in our society as it is. If we want to push for change it has to be progressively so people can embrace the advantages while keeping the "security" (social safety net, as others call it) they feel they need.

Jimmy Carter can suck my diiii- uh no, no nevermind that, I just got a mental image and it's not good. Eurhghh.

You are all very off-topic talking about politics. Lets just end this and empty out our wallets on this here table |----| and we'll just distribute this evenly among all of us. Doesn't matter if some of you put in $0 or if some of you put in $1,000...just put it all there and we can all go home with the same amount.

Suppose that the same amount would be enough to get everything one could possibly want, would you be against it in that case as well?

Because the 1000 could buy you perhaps more of everything you'd ever want, but the 0 of course could not.

More ontopic, you know that it takes money to get more money right? This is why the richest 1% of the USA has 34.6% of all the money in the USA. Now I don't mind selfmade people or succesful families, but one has to agree with me that it's odd that some people have enough money to drown them selfs in and others don't even have a drop of drinking water to feed them selfs.

Quote:

<http://motherjones.com/politics/2011/02/income-inequality-in-america-chart-graph>

A Harvard business prof and a behavioral economist recently asked more than 5,000 Americans how they thought wealth is distributed in the United States. Most thought that it's more balanced than it actually is. Asked to choose their ideal distribution of wealth, 92% picked one that was even more equitable.

Hell, according to this even you Americans are commie bastards...
