Yep it's true. Each vehicle has a soft spot. If you find it you can kill it with a single shot from Havoc or Sakua. I'll post screen shots and more info here. I want to see if anyone else has found the sweet spots first:)

I wouldve thought this was BS but it happened to me once. A havoc took out my Apache in a single hit.

The Apaches weakspot is near the lower backside, where the fuel tank is.

I found the weak spot for the Apache, I shot it on the Right front window, instant death. You cant just shoot the window itself, its a spot on the window near the center.

Even if this is a joke, Im not kidding. The shot has to be perfect, the spot is the shape of a bullet hole, and the bullet has to fit exactly. Even if part of the bullet is on the spot, it wont explode.

You have confirmed a sweet spot like this for EVERY vehicle? Interesting. Pretty useless though unless the vehicle isn't moving and you can scope in on it for a couple seconds.

It would make sense for there to be weak spots on the vehicles which, when hit, caused different amounts of damage.After all, hitting a foot soldier in the head does more damage than hitting the body, which does more damage than hitting a limb. So why not do the same with vehicles?

shrug Sounds like you are the one whose nerve I hit Its not your topic but you are the one saying you know how to do it and asking if Im jealous I really doubt the story of "all vehicles have a weak spot, the exact size of a bullet that will destroy them with one shot".If it WERE true...its totally useleass...1. You wouldn't be able to hit this spot while the target is moving.2. The odds are slim to none that even if the vehicle was stationary and you were scoping the base, that this spot would be facing you.So basically it's useless info, that is probably not true, and people who post "I know this and you don't and please beg me to show you" are lame, I don't care who they are Okay how about this...I just created a vehicle in level edit, and there is NO SUCH OPTION to assign or change armor points on a vehicle. You can enter the total health and the total armor, you cannot specify weak points or different armor levels.I can't wait for faulku44 to finally reply and say "hahaha I can't believe you idiots actually wasted time shooting at vehicles trying to find the fabled weak spots...you are such gullible noobs". The two shots look like they were taken at completely different times, so the difference in ammo means nothing. The credits are almost 50,000 more than at the second pic.I agree you can't tell anything from the pics, but you're reaching the wrong conclusions.

Try thinking. I shoot the Apache 3 times each, then switch over to an engineer and repair it to full strength, then switch back. How do you think I got so many bullet holes on 1 Apache? The 2nd shot was the first time I succeeded in the 1 hit kill, and the other shot showed me filling the Apache with shots trying to find that spot again.They were 2 diferent Apaches. So now its cleared up.

If you need more help. I took a SS of every single bullet that was fired, and counted them off. That SS was the shot that killed the Apache in 1 hit, and it was taken at tha particular angle. Does this clarify things a bit more?

I know I read it somewhere, some characters have armor piercing bullets so I believe it is true. If you can kill the person inside of the vehicle you can eliminate both.I think I have been the recipient of this tatic. There are alot of good snipers out there.Personally I stink at sniping at least in this game, not in real life (I was qualified sniper level in the US Army). Of course that was 20 years ago and since then I have been married and have 3 kids, its no wonder that my nerves are shot.

Just to add my two cents, I normally play as either sakura or havoc and I can normally take down an aircraft in 4-6 shots. Mobile artillery, MLRS and buggies go down just as easily. There are no weak points on the vehicles I am afraid. Oh and I play under the name Prophet on the Blueyonder number 1 server mainly.
