My favoriort Renegade days are those that I get in to fearce battles with other KILLERS. Now I am not saying that I'm the best but, * good. OK any way the point is if some one or clan is messen with ya. Post that persons game name and where they play most of the time(like gamespy or wol and server name). This is also a good place to post the names of those bad teammates you know the one i am talking about: tank stealers and the ones that block the doors so you can get in or out of buldings. This will be hitman for hire post, will see what happens with it.If I new where ACK played i would try to take him out though right now i am over killing this guy named Snake on gamespy colorado 1 server whos a tank stealer.

Wondering which view people most like to use when using an infantry unit. I personally prefer the third person view...

THIRD PERSON DEFINITELY Wider view range, and u can see what direction the bullets are coming from better.

I only use third for Hotwires and Techs (makes placing mines easier) and when infiltrating GDI with a SBH (really useful for keeping out of their way)...

3rd provides some benefits, no doubt, but I use 1st. Just like it better, helps the immersion factor...

I didnt even realize third person was an option. Laugh Out Loud!! I guess I prefer 1st person view, like BlackFlag, it seems more immediate if ths sh*t is coming at you first hand! By the way, what is an SBH?

Stealth Black Hand. If your standing still use 3rd person to so youll be able to see if one is behind trying to c4 you.

I like 1st person view because #1: You can see strait if you need to see where to shoot or something and #2: It makes the game seem more realistic. Oh, and SBH mean Stealth Black Hand weell i used both views. When placing c4 on a building i switch to First person cause it gives me more accrete to hit the MCT. Personally i think First Person gives u better accercy when shooting at an enemy. Im not sure about that but if u think so plz respond then. I use third person usally everywhre.

i use third all the time...its good for wen u r up against a sniper...i find it easier to jink out of the way....the only time i use 1st person is to get a good shot of the HON in islands wit a gunner.

It is not about liking or disliking a view. It doesn't matter what looks better or more 'realistic'. With the 1st person view you have a MUCH better accuracy, duckman is right. Even if you are used to 3rd p.v. you can't aim as accurate as you do in 1st p.v.

Although if you are in 3rd, just watch the targeting reticle and ignore every thing else, both views are just as accurate IMO because they both have the targeting reticle.

third is a heap more accurate, especially when moving around. 1st is only good if ur a tool, camping in the same spot, without moving...in which case go right ahead as i put a bullet down ur throat.all good snipers use 3rd

I disagree that first person is more accurate. I find third more accurate. when there are lots of people running around, and lots of targets, and you want to concentrate on one, it gets hard to tell when your target has switched in 1st person view, but in third person, you get a different perspective and can keep an eye on your target of choice better. My play accuracy and game play improved when I went to third person view.

3rd, undoubtedly, I feel comforted with third-why you ask? It's because instead of worrying about a c4'er coming, I can snuggle with my laser chain gun.... ah laser chain gun...

3rd person when you want to see around corners to see what is coming down tunnels and halls....
1st person when you want to aim and shoot people... or are running away while jumping and strafing... 1st person enables you to aim better as well as place c4 on mct's.... as well as enable you to judge where when and how and enemy will fire upon you... allowing a greater amount of ease while trying to escape or make an attack.... 3rd person is best when you are trying to rush a base on small to medium sized maps when you are trying to avoid being seen by enemy units...

this can also help you to ambush enemies when they come running down the halls or are turning around making sure nobody is following them in a tunnel... 3rd person can also allow you a slight advantage if you are sniping and are worrying if there is a stealth behind you planting c4 on your back.... you have only a slight advantage but when a stealth is trying to put c4 on you... they usually like to take their time.... and get as close as possible... moving out from snipe mode and into 3rd person can allow you a quick check to see if there is nobody behind you due to the light refraction you see when you get close to stealth units ie. like heat waves, for those of you who are new to this... 3rd person in tanks is a given however I'd like to mention that mounting the camera on the turret rather than the chassis is the best way to drive your tanks/vehicles.... as this will allow a 360 degree sight radius and can allow you to get squishes while still enabling you to shoot at vehicles or tanks or other units..
