So, because American lives revolve around working quite a bit of their life, and they tend to ignore random people that they don't even know (labeling them as just a race is stereotypical), that makes them... racist?

Playing off of the idea that you have at least some shred of intellect, there are two things I want to point out about what you said.

1. America is more than just the kids in your class. What they say and do is in no way reflective of what everyone else in the country says and does.

2. I would like you to reflect on your example you posed about the kids in your class not paying attention to the foreign exchange student. How are you so sure that people aren't paying attention to him BECAUSE he is foreign? Do you socialize with him? Who are you to draw this conclusion?

Unless you know for a 100% fact that the other people in your class don't pay him mind because he isn't a local student, there seems to be no way for you to come to that conclusion. Read: You're the one jumping to the conclusion therefore you're the one being racist.

are you trying to play stupid or what?
let me ask you one question do you find Chinese people who can speak English well fascinate or not?
If you answered no, that mean your are racist.
do you know this? many of Chinese people find white people who can speak Chinese well to be fascinating.

So basically, you just said that if I don't think a chinese person is "facsinating" because he/she can't speak English, that makes me racist?

You're misguided, lol

I'm not even going to dignify that with a response until you learn what the definition of the word "racist" is.

I didn't actually read this thread, because Dicktree's threads kill brain cells very rapidly...

In short, America is so fucking scared of being racist it is actually getting more and more unfair in favor of idiots because they are a "minority"...

Fuck that.

My fiance worked hard through school to get good grades and be able to go to college. She ended up with a full ride, and some extra money for expenses... but she had to keep a high GPA.

Her Hispanic friend from high school didn't work nearly half as hard, but got a full ride to the same college, way more money for expenses, and didn't even need to keep a good GPA.

What is that shit all about?

For some reason, people think that indulging people because of their race is somehow different than discriminating people because of their race.

Sure, one way doesn't involve taking someone down... but it still is a form of racial alienation..

We aren't racist. We hate all the fucking foreigners and different people alike. It's completely equal and fair. You have no reason to think you'll be treated differently from the Iraq terrorists that roam freely within our borders. That is, unless you're indeed American. Then life is fucking good.

I support equal opportunity for all American born citizens. All the others can be treated equally to each other as well, so long as it's far under the treatment of the real Americans. AMERICA FOR AMERICANS. The bottom of the ocean for the rest. I read the bible, and that's basically what god told me. So fuck off dogtree, and go back to the dumbass planet you came from.

This is exactly how I see it. The people coming to America illegally are actually getting benefits of health-care and such... It's ridiculous. I believe that if someone comes to America legally and fairly, and tries to establish themself in the working class, then they can get the benefits of an average American. But, for someone to hop a fucking border and get benefit is bs.

It's because the Chinese student spoke English and Chinese and all you guys spoke is Spanish, or at least that's what the bad typing suggests.

Probably because someone from another country is a rarity in iceland or wherever you were an exchange student to, while a chinese exchange student in america isn't very fascinating because america is a multicultural country where you know people of all races every since first grade.
