I have never posted on here before now.. I just want to invite anyone to join our chat. Back in the old days before I took over Nite-Serv we had renegade servers were thriving and having a good time. Since renegade is not really any fun to me any longer.. and I dont see the sense spending money on a server to run a empty server.. seeing as for the most part renegade is getting closer to death. Nite-Serv is now mostly a chatting community, our IRC network irc.Nite-Serv.com is ran by me and we have a few communities linked with us, such as kamuix and cloud-zone along with a new one called steel guardians. Im sure a bunch of you hate any of those communities including mine, But on IRC everyone is cool, our central channel #hangout is where i chill at, and not much goes on usually, thats why im posting this to get more users on there, that are interested in general chat of any kind, i do however ask you to not bring too much drama, or be a complete dumbass. We try to help any we can, mostly me helping with any IRC issue there is, Even running/hosting your own IRC. We have a nifty server called "Janus Internetwork Linker" it links different server, such as right now st0rm for an example, on a per channel basis. You can create a channel (share it) and then take claim to it so no remote networks can override and get chan ops. Its a very nifty server and i invite any other networks to message me or ask to join up. this link might help out with anything you might want to know off the top

http://www.irc-wiki.org/Janus_Commands

Description of janus:

Janus' short description is the Janus Inter-Network Channel Linker. In basic terms, it provides server administrators the ability to link non-common IRCd's as if they were the same flavor of IRCd. Both networks may keep their services, and both networks can be picky about which channels they would like to share, and the channels they wish to keep local/private. As JanusIRC used to say "It is a Relay Bot on steroids."

We have a website with a few options for webchatting at <http://nite-serv.com> either java or flash chat. depending on what you prefer, i might throw up more options later.. such as mibbit and qwebirc, just havent got around to it..

Again I invite anyone that needs anything or just wants to try and chat up to our network, theres plenty there to offer you just needs someone to use it.. oh also! we do have a minecraft server, at mc.nite-serv.com its on our network in #Nite-MC if you love minecraft check that out, i'll have to allow you build rights for you to build though...

I think thats all I wanted to say for now. Cheers ^^

Because we all need more IRC networks to idle on, it's not as if we can chat on the ones we already have...

It's just an invite, I don't appreciate a smart ass remark. I doubt you've been there and know whats there to offer. And mine links to others, so that way you dont have to be on a bunch to idle You could also talk to your current fav IRC networks and see if they would want to janus. To ease users haveing to join 5 different networks just to be on one channel, and instead join one and be on all 5 channels! But if we were to go by what you just said, no one should ever start an IRC network.

If you don't want smartasss remarks, don't post about it. That's a sure way of not getting smartass comments.

Nite serv was a great sniping community once upon a time, but it's time is over. R.I.P.

You guys do know there is more than just Renegade... right...? lol Mike and Azazel both talk as if just because there is no more renegade its time to kill the community. Like I said its a place of chat now. No "killing it" or "RIP" Mike you join kamuix still, the IRC is still there and probably always will be. As will Nite-Serv I have no intention of ever killing it off. It'll always be there to welcome any chatters or anyone needing some help

But..

Haters gonna hate.

Thought about that, but not seriously. I've seen too many people rename to something else because the previous one didn't catch on. I'm just gonna keep it as is. Don't feel like changing my servers names too much work..

I miss my online community so much! I love how my servers were still running and my community is still around despite me having been gone from gaming for so long. Lol atleast I haven't died!

But seriously yeah I'm so proud of the people who kept my servers going since i've been gone I honestly never thought that It would last without me just because the game was losing traffic but it's so nice to see how the online communities somewhat stuck together.

The one thing I definately don't miss is all the assholes in the Renegade community constantly judging and criticising eachother over stupid pointless things. But then again that was one of the reasons I loved having my own server and community because there was nothing like going from the renegade community back to my Kamuix server where I got along with everyone(even though I was the owner so everyone pretty much had to get along with me haha) and for the most part everyone in my server got along very well I mean there was a bit of drama but honestly it was NOTHING like the n00bstories community for example and others.

Like at the time 5 years ago or so I was really shy in person and my server and community was where my social life and honestly some of my best days were back when I had my online community and being creative with making serverside maps, mods and my own commands and whatnot. But yeah I loved my community and i'd go back and do it all over again if I could but there hasn't been a game like Renegade to do anything like that with as far as I know.

If you think its ok for server admins to read your private messages to people who have nothing to do with them then your quite clearly a faggot..

After awhile your nick became somewhat of a legend, with most of the players having never actually talked to you or seen you in-game. All they really knew about you is the stories we passed down lol
