What do you think about that,when ,for example,some player joins GDI,and gives N0d info about attacks,defences,etc etc etc...Is that a tactic or a N00bs way to win?(or lose)?In the demo it was quite often seen in the servers,but in the real Renegade not so often.

That's no tactic. That's cheating, and a kickable offense in my opinion, sabotaging your own team like that.Now, if you're really playing, and you decide to give them false information, then that's another story. A friend of mine likes to plant a nuke or ion, then yell in the all-chat about some location where it isn't. Some of the time, it works since some players either aren't thinking to look at the chat, or haven't hit "tab" to see the full list of players in the upper right. They rush the building it supposedly is and then find it is really somewhere else.Being a blatant "spy" is one thing, playing mind games is entirely another.

I like yelling out plans as well to everyone, but the real deals are on team only
