Combat Arms.

Ha ha, I kill myself sometimes.

There's also Assault Cube, but it appears to be full of South Americans. Major negative.

it seems like non-casual free games become pretty cheat-infested pretty quickly

if you gave world of tanks a chance (you impatient fuck) you'd learn the finer points of the game, and in time understand that they do seriously competitive clan battles every day of the week at this very moment i'm sure hundreds of serious-faced tank nerds are duking it out on maps fighting for land control the winners get an assload of exp and free gold

Combat Arms and Crossfire are downright awful, cheat filled, and use "hurrdurr rent your weapons for 30 days for more ingame money than you can earn in those 30 days" bullshit.

There's really nothing good when it comes to decent competitive FPS's anymore. Thank console FPS's for this.

too many retards on AVA @ZIMMER: Yeah, pretty much. Valve also helped a bit with all the dumb shit they added to tf2 and with never fixing CSS.

I haven't played TF2 in awhile, but from what I can see a lot of it's just whiney bitching about BAWW HATS BAW and other minor stupid things. Just don't buy the goddamn hats, and if you're any good you can easily fuck over anyone with some trivial stat boost.

Thats what you get with free games, competitive wise though, I don't see a better game.

edit: talking about ava fyi.

There's a few neat third person action/shooting games out there. S4 League was nice, but goddamn the lag and hacking was out of hand last time I played.

ya, TF2 is still my favorite modern fps and certainly the best free one. QL would be killer with CPMA support, but i can't stand playing quake without instant weaponswitch. warsaw isn't as fleshed out and mostly an instagib game. enemy territory is probably still full of slavs, cheaters and shitty server mods.

Savage2 (<http://www.savage2.com>) is free and I happen to host servers for it.

It's free, non-casual, and an FPS. Cool is a matter of opinion, so I'll leave that up to you.

I play CSS every day. Its very good and they updated the game completely a few months ago. Plus they always have over 10k players online.
