I don't use a keyboard. I have programmed my Strategic Commander (basically an additional-super gaming mouse), so that I play 1st person games with basically 2 mice, except the StratComm has 6 buttons on it, for crouch, jump, 180 turn, etc. Before this year, I never played a 1st person shooter, so I bought the hardware to assist me. I still don't have the jump/strafe/shoot skills a lot of these lifer-gamers have, which is why Renegade appeals to me (more than just point and shoot)

AD - Staff left and rightWS - Forward and BackwardShift - crouch (I couldn't take C, I'm too used to half-life's CTRL has crouch)C - WalkSpace - JumpAnd I'm probably gonna change Y and possible T to talk all and team modes (same reason as Blazer has it, except for about ever FPS game he's played had those as the talk buttons)

o yea. but i mostly use the scoll on the mouse. kind of difficult to aim in such a fast chunky zoom but i only use it in dog fights. which is most of the time. i only use T and G for sniping points. maybe i can change F to F1 because i don't switch the third person much. yea that would be good. i'll do it now. any more custom keys?

I use Q and E for strafe instead of the usual A and D because I am usually running forwards (w)...this way I just rest my 3 fingers on QWE and I am a strafing god

W = Forward
S = Backward
D = Strafe Right
Space = Jump
Left Shift = Crouch
F = 1st/3rd Person View
Left Click = Primary Fire
Right Click = Secondary Fire
Mouse Wheel = Select weapons and zoom in/out
Caps = Walk (Not like I use it really)
F2 = Chat all
F3 = Team Chat
Mainly the default setup but it works for me.

The only keys I have changed are to use the arrow keys to go forward, back, strafe left and strafe right respectively. I think I changed that anyway Also I changed my use key from e to pressing the mouse wheel.

how do you get it to work? did you add some kind of chip in there so that the comp reads the controler? that's what mines basically is. it has this flat little microchip inside a plastic case that makes it able to read and install.

how the hell do you use the arrow key to move but use the other keys to straff and jump and stuff while at the same time having to aim with the mouse?
