So many times I see someone respawn in the building that needs repair and that person just buys a character and or vehicle and takes off. WTF? Buy a basic engineer and repair the * building! It will give you some credits and points and you'll be helping the team. As soon as it is repaired, then you can go off on your Rambo crusade.It's that simple, just do it!

Sometimes the simplest stuff needs to be said, because the simplest stuff isn't getting done.

I have noticed the same thing so many times. So many people are playing the game for points and not for team play. I'm all for scoring points, but my team always comes first.

I just hate that..

Well the worst of all has to be the person who has an expensive character and runs past a beacon and you look at the teams status and see he has a butload of cash. WTF?

WTF?Even if I would be low on cash, I'd still swap any character to an engie if I would be able to disarm a beacon..

I see your point, but if the building is already getting enough repair support whilst getting pounded by artillery it's sometimes better for someone to buy a Havoc/PIC to take out the enemy rather than constantly repairing the damage that is incurred on the structure.What gets me is that people with loadsa of cash, do not spend it all at the end of the game. Whenever the map is nearing the last 5 minutes and i have 2000+ creds, i always buy tanks for teammates until my money runs out. It all helps that final, last minute rush.

And if they need anything, to just let me know (when I'm at the PT, I always ask if anyone needs any vehicle).
