Don't forget XWIS is a free service. I and everyone can use it and not pay a dime for it. Bitching is the easy way (and free too) but not very thankful.

That being said, I hope Olaf, or another person from XWIS will give us a some information on the down time, like how, or how long. I understand if it's just a few minutes, or maybe an hour or so, they don't. But, like last time, the down time is considerable this time. It's not good for the game.

All the other IRC servers I've encountered are also free services, but they have an uptime that's a lot higher than XWIS and if they're having issues with uptime or have scheduled maintenance, they announce it (before hand). We have no idea what the fuck is going on. If Wilo is giving their server a miscarriage they can't do anything about it, but it's expected that the at least make an announcement about being attacked/downtime.

I have to admit that I'm not an expert on the Xwis subject.

However I think it should be possible that the Renfds will keep running when Xwis is offline example a dualconnection or autoswitch to Gamespy (Still outputting a warning that Xwis is offline and cant connect however / checking every 5 min)
Without the need to switch to gamespy and manual check when Xwis is back online.

How about the situation how it is now but then the other way around; host on gamespy, but also broadcast to XWIS. That would stop the FDS from crashing when XWIS goes down.

As for hosting our own XWIS; there is multiple reasons that I see to not desire that, the most important being that XWIS made legal agreements about it with EA games. The users of XWIS connect through it by a license from EA games. If we are to host our own XWIS we would not get the users, obviously. And why would we want to host our own XWIS if we can't get the users? And even so, it would not be prone to attacks/errors and (most importantly) renedrama. There would be no benefits to this idea, even more considering there is also gamespy, which is much less receptive for above listed destructive factors. But let's say we work that all out legally, who would host it? XWIS to me seems a very neutral host, and reasonable people will agree that neutrality is in danger when someone within the renegade community would host XWIS from now on.

BHS already controls the Renegade part of XWIS pretty much. Hosting in GameSpy mode isn't that smart as the FDS has special exceptions for GameSpy mode and that might cause unforseen issues. I think putting the FDS in LAN mode with some third party software to broadcast to GSA should work just fine. If someone would write third party software to connect to a WOL master server and handle everything that would be great, the FDS shuts down around 30 seconds after loading a level if it isn't connected to WOL anymore in WOL mode (with a sound of the Commando saying "real tough guy" being played and an admin message shown telling that the server shut down).

I heard the kick and ban console commands don't work properly if the server isn't running 4.0 (which is easy to fix by replacing the console commands) other than that I don't know of any issues, but then again I've never seen a server online running in LAN mode so I'm not sure.

someone ran the idea of st0rm being behind it that wouldn't at all surprise me
"If we can't play on XWIS then NO ONE CAN!"
they don't realize that what happened to them happened because of flooding and other childish actions their refusal to part with the childish individual was what kept the ban in place now, quite surprisingly, a retaliation of you guessed it more flooding is their answer to being banned for flooding someone somewhere feels like a knight in shining armor right now, but they either don't understand or care that their cause is the wrong one

The reason is not that weird. It assumes that if you don't know the IP and port, you won't join.
There are some IP ranges reserved for lan, but if you want, you could even use IP's like 1.1.1.1 in your LAN. Hence, it can't filter on IP's for lan more

 Fixed for the most part  iRANian wrote on Sun, 01 April 2012 08:30If someone would write third party software to connect

I actually made a backup XWIS server for Roleplay 2 so when XWIS does go down it does not affect our operations. Its actually very easy for any mildly skilled programmer to make a fake xwis server that renegade will accept. I wrote a documentary on the roleplay 2 forums on how to do it but Jerad deleted it and never made a backup copy of it.

I was able to contact one of my servers to get the source code. Heres an XWIS Emulator that will allow your FDS to start and load along with accepting connections from a IP Address and port

 XWIS Server Emulator (ALPHA)
http://brandanlasley.com/releases/WOL/XWIS%20Server%20Emulator.zip

This is the first public test of this application and I would like to know the results from it. It may or may not work since its still a unstable version. Please note that this is not a WOLProxy as soon as XWIS Resumes operations in order to be listed once again on XWIS you have to close the application this will not transmit FDS code to XWIS!

Directions:
1. Close FDS
2. Extract application anywhere.
3. Open application
4. Run FDS
Not tested on 4.0!

(on some computers you may need to make sure that hosts file has write access and you run the program as administrator!)

It should be ever server owners right to enjoy free uninterrupted XWIS service.

How would you get new players to join the new XWIS? Or would they be joining the old? Not sure how it works, but if it involves splitting the community then don't do it. Not that many players look at these forums and wont know what settings they need to join any new XWIS's.

Can be easily done, but you're right about splitting the community in two. I already made a replica of the xwis server (posted in other thread) and I've studied xwis for 2 years and pretty much have it covered if anyone needs help just ask.

Doesnt make sense, but what I think you're trying to say is it wont have the same function as XWIS. I guess later on ill make a backup XWIS server (like WOLProxy) that has a modfied WOLAPI.dll so when you lose connection to XWIS it will drop FDS and the Renegade Client on to a backup XWIS until normal XWIS is restored. But this server would have to be hosted on a dedicated server with a dedicated ip.

Subject: Re: Is XWIS down again?

It should be possible to do this easier. Since it's IRC, it would be possible to make the Ren servers connect to a different IRC/WOLAPI server which then could be linked to the real XWIS server. Advantage of this would be that it is unlikely that both would go down without notice and thus that the servers could stay up in XWIS mode.

I don't fix typos as an actual bug. It doesn't effect the way the application runs and no compiler has a spell check I've known that for quite some time. Also how can you say there's mistakes in the code itself when it's closed source. Of course it has some issues since I compiled 2 of the same servers into one application in 30 minutes. Don't like it don't use it.

It just makes the way you work seem messy. It doesn't matter that it's closed source, when someone doesn't take the time to re-read their own code for spelling mistakes it could make people assume they haven't paid much attention to the rest of the application either.

Or paid more attention to the rest of the code in general. The Westwood and spelling errors were done by my laziness and poorly using the "replace all" and made a typo. I believe I fixed those issues that picture was from half a year ago I didn't want to upload another one. Yes, it's also poorly coded and doesn't meet my quality control checks but it works just fine on our servers and I felt that it worked good enough to help other people Taking the time to reread 5000 lines of code and GUI code each time I publish it doesn't sound fun. It was a rush job yes I agree on that.

Appears like it. The server is actually up but a SYN is answered with RST-ACK. Whoever is doing it is doing a damn fine job so far.

He only cares about the money not the community. If you really want to waste your time then mail him at olafvdspek@gmail.com. He will read and if you're lucky he'll also reply with a one-liner, you can send him some nice regards from myself too.

Brandan wrote on Mon, 02 April 2012 07:40Also how can you say there's mistakes in the code itself when it's closed source.
VB.NET apps are hardly closed source. Stuff seems legit though, good job. Alternatives to Xwis are always welcome.

I don't know st0rm but I sure as hell sympathise with them. I've been both permanently banned from S-T before with false warn-log entries by an admin and from the game as well for a totally ridiculous reason with no proof disclosed by them whatsoever. The way Xwis "the official server" is treating the community they really don't deserve to have one and they certainly don't deserve to be running these games either. It's no wonder these attacks are only increasing and I wouldn't be surprised if this is the end of Xwis or may be it soon.

 Also the server isn't being ddosed unless it's poorly executed because the server still answers ping requests at reasonable reply time. Unless the irc server itself was shutdown/partly dosed/or someone just doesn't want people to connect.

Greetings,

you compare a false-ban that you once experienced on some obscure server to this situation? that's horribly inaccurate, at best Wilost0rm was flooding and crashing other servers multiple times a day for literally months on end, non-stop the only server that still filled up on a daily basis was his main target, and his goal was to get all of those players to join his server; this game is over 10 years old now, and terrorism of that magnitude isn't good for Renegade as a whole once it was determined that it was indeed him both he and his servers were banned it was made clear that if he was removed from the st0rm picture that st0rm would be allowed back on and everything would be fine the fact that he did not offer to step down shows how much both he cares about Renegade now the rumor is that him or someone associated with him is flooding XWIS so no one can play; if you honestly view what XWIS did as wrong then you should view this as very, very wrong funny how you seem to think that sort of behavior is justified

It allows connections on port 4003,4005.

Port 4005 is a list of servers available for the xwis.
Port 4003 does the actual xwis work.

It replies to the FDS requests makes and over all tries to make FDS happy with not running on XWIS. If the hosts file doesn't work I can always send to a modified WOLAPI.dll

How so? There may be some optimizations like string concatenation done at compile-time but they are minor.

Ping doesn't have anything to do with this. Xwis has rather massive bandwidth. Taking up all the bandwidth is not necessary when smashing their TCP/IP stack does what the attackers want just fine.

And did you really have to quote the whole post?

Ping response time would be affected by a ddos of any kind. A good ddos would take down the entire server to prevent the administrator from blocking the attack in general. Is it a ddos or just a dos then XWIS server is shit.

For example the old atomix used to get a lot of players via the RR launcher.

If any server is using RR and my program it should still populate a list gamespy as well for the xwis servers with gamespy program things.

EvilWhiteDragon wrote on Mon, 02 April 2012 01:04It should be possible to do this easier. Since it's IRC, it would be possible to make the Ren servers connect to a different IRC/WOLAPI server which then could be linked to the real XWIS server. Advantage of this would be that it is unlikely that both would go down without notice and thus that the servers could stay up in XWIS mode. It's not just a IRC server a little bit more complex bit you're right you could just link them or have some DNS setting that shifts to another server if one of them fails. Pretty much summarized what I just said btw.

Can a mod merge both xwis down threads?

You can use RenDirCon and find out the IP and port information for the servers you want by visiting their websites, they are bound to have the information in there, I know that n00bstories is up at the moment, possibly jelly's too.

Atomix doesn't seem to be affected too much by this problem as it runs on wolspy as well. Most of the mainstreem servers are taking a real hit though. I know n00bstories has lost alot of players, not too sure how Jelly is coping... Let's hope Olaf fixes it sooner rather than later.

Shifting servers doesn't solve the problem, particularly because servers would still lose all players because of a restart. Also, DNS updates can take up to 24 hours, so that might be longer than the downtime.

This would just be a solution to keep servers from crashing or serverowners having to update their settings.

Dynamic or DNS pools take seconds.

Sounds like a hell of a better way than to just be down for 4 days until xwis is fixed.

Some networks have outstanding ddos protection. Facebook is one of them but they also have a shit ton more server than we do. Google is unddosable. More servers = slightly harder to ddos and would weaken the attack any good network administrator could stop a ddos also.

A source of mine is telling me he knows what happened but he can't exactly tell me what it is, apparently due to legality issues... But from the latest rumors i've been hearing, they've been completely hacked and wiped.

Would kind of explain why the huge downtime. But I think it's ridiculous to atleast not update this community. I wouldn't be surprised if the playerbase was slightly affected due to this. They might think it's dead forever, when as a shitty reality, might even remotely be true..

It would be ridiculous to think they don't have any backups. If they don't have any backups of this XWIS infrastructure, they should have never been entrusted with it as they are inexperienced. Any system administrator would know that you have to have some backups off-site that are not accessible in the event you are hacked or have hardware failure.

If it's not important to them anymore, then some other consortium should be in charge of XWIS.

I would've expected a hard core rene-junky like yourself to have more heart for the game then this. How totally irresponsible of you, a TT member and renegade elite, to sprout out such nonsense. You are a representative of TT. The aim of TT is to make ren live longer, and make it as it was intended. Now you wish for XWIS to stay down, which no doubt would mean a much quicker end for renegade.. why? So you can finally quit ren and not have anything to go back to, when you, as time has learned do once in a while, quit renegade "for good?" Cause if I remember correctly this happens every so often with you. Grow up man. Love the game, or let it be. Don't be like this.

why would he go through all the trouble? does he want to be #1 but sucks too bad to reach it without cheating?

I haven't been around for almost 1.5 years. So why would I do this just now?
I have never dodged any game ban or ever cheated for that matter. I was banned for an IRC relay that went wrong. Yes, I did release a cheat since everyone was cheating anyway and you were happy enough to use it, hypocrite.

You're a fucking moron if you think I would do something like that as you are a fucking moron for believeing I've been playing over the past year. So get off my ass and the drugs you seem to be on, cheater boy. I have a legit reason for disliking Xwis as many others do. I've put more work into making Xwis a better place than any other cocksucker from strike-team.

liquidv2 wrote on Tue, 03 April 2012 10:54

For as little as I played I have several rank #1s attained without any cheating. I've always helped players on Xwis and helped making it a better place. I have many game recordings and still upload them to YouTube whenever I feel like it: http://www.youtube.com/user/AlexGoMAD/videos

It's just fucking ridiculous what people are accusing me of here, on MSN and on Skype. I'll just ignore/block/delete everyone with the audacity to come up with this stuff from now on.

So random guy from tampa bay, what the fuck are you doing here? We would (and AFAIK have) offered our services in hosting the Renegade part of XWIS, but since XWIS has a contract with EA, thats not going to happen. So if he decided to do the same as EA (being screwing the community), the community will put up alternative servers soon enough. The WOL protocol isn't to hard to understand.

There's already an open-source working WOL clone too, although the coding quality for it isn't that high, it indeed isn't hard to write a clone.

But yeah I'd rather have the Renegade community itself host a clone so we might actually have advanced stuff like multiple servers serving traffic etc.

Not sure what all these Strike-Team forums retards are doing here...

Umm...why not give it to someone else who is willing to do this...maybe even for free? Just because Olaf may not want to do it, doesn't mean there isn't 100 more people in line who would be willing to pay to support XWIS.

To Olaf - Can you maybe reach out to the C&C community and make a list of what you need to ensure XWIS has a contingency in place so that it can stay online? Maybe we could setup another hot-site to ensure it isn't offline for several days again? I'm sure if you made a list that would make XWIS more reliable, everyone would be on board and help out.

Olaf has done a nearly flawless job of it for years now, and people are far too quick to criticize him whenever something happens after playing Generals i think Tiberian Sun (and Firestorm) are way too slow-paced i've been playing C&C shit since i was like 8 years old (way back in 1996) so i've been there the whole way i even got most of the EA stuff, up to Red Alert 3

let's not talk about that though; it makes me far too angry what makes you think TS is better than Renegade? did they release toys for that? are they anywhere near as cool as my super awesome MAMMOTH TANK?

i appreciate strategy games but Renegade is a game in its own genre it's not simply a FPS; almost all FPS games are just death match style it's a First Person Strategy game; it plays like a FPS for the most part but is team-based and set up / laid out like a strategy game damage ratios are similar, similar strategies are employable, etc.

the most popular server in Renegade has no time limit so it's even more like C&C 1 than a standard timed server; you're doing the same thing basically, but from the ground rather than up high

the multiplayer is (and always will be) fucking sick
i highly recommend you try it out when Olaf gets things working again

This is pretty damn infuriating because we (n00bstories) had a huge event planned for today and now we can't do it.

I can appreciate that it may have ruined your scheduled event but as liquid has said already, I don't think he is necessarily doing a bad job when it comes to operating XWIS, this isn't his fault, you can't blame him for being vulnerable to attacks, I'm pretty sure most of the communities here have been affected by attacks over the years and I guess now it is XWIS's turn, don't be so harsh on him.

Not really, they can update the DNS info for a few servers and run them off backups...which apparently don't even exist. Obviously those backups can be attacked too but that hasn't happened.

If you want to know how well XWIS managed the Renegade part of the network, try registering a new XWIS nick.

So much speculation. I wish the communication from XWIS' end was better then it actually is now. A lot better. Sure I understand things can go wrong, but I wish that there was a post a lot sooner than now about what's going on.

On a different note; that tiberiansun guy is a complete moron. "Get a job?" It was not one of the renegade community people that posted that, but a troll from over at your island. And I request you go back to that island, cause obviously you can't even tell the difference between your own asshole and a hole in the ground, if that's what you conclude after reading what was said here, which means you're posts, no matter what the content is, will always translate "blablablablabla" to people that actually take the time to read and understand the cause and dynamics of a forum discussion.

Hey that sure beats making a tcp server in vb, much rather do 10 lines of php

The programmer of wolproxy actually did everything correct except 1 thing he forgot the simplest process of xwis but did the hardest. He forgot to include the server list on 4005 if he did that it would work very well also. If someone knows mirc script.

Actually fds just needs to connect to port 4005 say hi then it disconnects. It's not much stress on it at all not too much more code either.

Fds says one thing
Server says another thing
Fds disconnects and the cycle starts over once fds is restarted

Thank you for your negative comment. XWIS is a very simple TCP/IP IRC-ish (not really irc protocol) service. FDS can run easily and its not that hard to understand.

Open wireshark.

tcp.port == 4003 open fds and boom you have everything the fds needs to run.

tcp.port == 4005 for the server list

Have a nice day douchebag.

Same I would think a Judge may throw the case out for being stupid but people have sued stupid stuff before and won so eh. But if you have evidence of a unauthorized screenshot that does break piracy law. It does also make scripts 4.0 classified as a malicious/spyware.

It's for RA2...Olaf made an optional patch that randomly uploads screenshots of you playing the game online to XWIS, e.g. http://xwis.net/ra2/games/2004/

Scripts 4.0 server comes with a console command that will automatically make a screenshot for a 4.0 player and upload it to a site (PHP scripts actually) that the server owner provided with another console command.

Wait.... WHAT?

Ren automatically uploads screenshots? In what manner? I run sensitive NDA data on my machine and its open sometimes I'm in game. I have a hug monitor setup and I run Ren in window mode... Does it take a full screen shot or just the DirectX screenshot????

It's for RA2...Olaf made an optional patch that randomly uploads screenshots of you playing the game online to XWIS, e.g. http://xwis.net/ra2/games/2004/

Scripts 4.0 server comes with a console command that will automatically make a screenshot for a 4.0 player and upload it to a site (PHP scripts actually) that the server owner provided with another console command.

Is there any reason for that besides to catch cheaters/ waste a tin of bandwidth and server space?

Seems abit overboard to do that it'll also probably create lag for slow connections. Cheaters don't require such a large overreaction.

There's so many cheaky comments that would fit a reply to this, I can't decide which one is best. Please let me know your personal favorite.

1. Hi and welcome to renegade, you must be new here.

Quote:2. Are you sure it's Renegade you've been playing these last couple of years?

Quote:3. You're right. The aim for TT should not be to stop cheaters. Pointless.

Quote:4. Good point. Just imagine if you lagged someone to prove or disprove they're cheating.

There's many more but I think I made my point.

There's only one system running everything. For example crashing the RA2 results server takes it down for TS and YR as well.   The protocols are basically the same for all games. So why have 15 apps when you can do it in three. And it's only vulnerable in the sense that anyone could upload any picture he wants to it, hence the porn.

No, there is no other reason. Also you can't even catch cheaters with it, considering you have to install it and it's not mandatory. Xwis has more than enough bandwidth. Using it is basically a way of saying "I'm not going to cheat (anymore)". Cheating had gone way out of hand since I've gotten banned.

And Olaf, could you please answer my questions or reply to the mail I sent you exactly a week ago? Thanks babe!

You answered your own question, you only need to take down one thing to take down everything, image uploading is really vulnerable even if you encrypt the images, putting the results server on the same box as the main "IRC" server too.

I'm no talking about xwis when someone forces your computer to to upload a image it uses your upload bandwidth some people have very small upload speed that will cause players to suffer from extreme lag during the process.

First of, it's NOT XWIS. The XWIS image uploader is unrelated to TT.
Second, you download and install TT voluntarily and the screenshot functionality is mentioned and documented.
Third, you would rather be banned of a server than having it lag for maybe a few minutes and then being able to stay?
Fourth, PLEASE tell me you're trolling...

Was taking about the ra and strike team screen shot but yes if you have paid of very little bandwidth you'll be pissed if someone is wasting you money because they think you're cheating.
Just because it's documented doesn't make it legal it's still unauthorized unless the user accepts a terms of service or has the ability to deny it.

LOL, chill Brandy. <_< It's your choice whether you download it or not. You're made aware of what it is and what it does. It basically hooks the screenshot function within the game and fires it every so many frames. If you're a fair player there's no problem, if you're a cheater and can stop, well that's good for you but if you can't then just don't use it until there's a hack around it or roll your own, shouldn't be that hard.

Also as a private person you won't have any success sueing a big-ass company like EA, they make sure anything they do stays legal with their EULAs and whatever. I mean they can fucking ban you for no reason from the services you have paid for and still win in court.

I know a person who sued EA for their SecruROM not being added into their EULA and won in a California court (Spores? I think it was called). Something about how someones DVD rom lit on fire because of it I dont exactly remember the reason behind it. Also in addition the person (you) wouldn't sue isn't EA because EA doesn't own TT/Stike Team uploader. Just saying people with low bandwidth would be very mad especially if they're paying for each megabyte they download. Probably if you care that much you could probably null the requests or hex edit if the game doesn't use checksums.

Theres actually several lawsuits that won for the spores DRM.

Thanks also for taking the time to be extra creepy, its even direct from the Facebook server ^^. Could have just gotten it from our project site http://roleplay2.com

(Personally I like the screenshot picture (server owner) it allows us to track bugs easier, would like it to notify the user of this illegal screen capture through)

he hasn't seemed to get the concept of apostrophes down yet
he's not even foreign so he has no excuse; he just sucks

let me re-write those two sentences so they're Azazel-friendly:

he hasn't seemed to get the concept of apostrophe's down yet
hes not even foreign so he has no excuse; he just suck's
You mean those mystical half quote things right?

Pssh, only English PHD graduates know how to do those.

Most people know that VPS means virtual private server over which you can tunnel your connection using either VPN or SSH. So that leaves us with 4 options.

But wait, Tor/proxies have a too high latency to get you anywhere with gaming. So evading on that level isn't too easy, and certainly not free.

Its extremely easy to evade a ban its laughable that you couldn't. A 10 year old could figure out how to evade a ban.

Quite hillarious. I'd suggest you get your facts straight, well Brandon can't as he seem's to be unable to use his brain to it's full potential.

Liquid, I still love you.
It's Brandan,

Hey you're the one who can't evade a ban.
Simple steps: VPN, Different mac, different nickname and sometimes even different serial.

Get around server bans and xwis bans. Not even all those steps are required.

Posting via mobile sucks.

Brandan.

Why would I possibly want to be evade bans? Bans which don't actually exist anyway, lol. As I said, hillarious.

Liquid hasn't gotten anything to worry about anyways, Jelly marathon is long and boring. I did my time in rcs-marathon for long enough, aow's is where it's at - when I get the time that is.

I have a VPN and it works well with gaming and my 35/35 Mbps and my 100/100 Mbps vpn

Hundreds and hundreds of people play games over VPN everyday and have no lag a good example is a program by LogMeIn calle hamachi that allows players to VPN into the hosts network and play on LAN.

Also what happened to you cant change your ISP I doubt you even know what a VPN is or even a remote idea of how the Internet even works.

Actually since that ban is looking for the host name that is ip + ISP you could also just call your ISP and have then change your IP it doesnt take so long most of everyone in the world who pays for cheap Internet has dynamic IPs so just turn off your router for an hour and boom. Unless you ban the entire ISP but let me know how that goes when you ban a major ISP like Verizon.

Quote:Actually since that ban is looking for the host name that is ip + ISP

I probably have no idea what im talking about but I remember from modding at Atomix, even if you did change IP a section of the DNS would not change.(It was how we kept out chiefpoooface)

if ((92.234. isin $6-) && (live23-0-0- isin $8-) && (.know.cable.virginmedia.com isin $8-)) FDS kick $2

In this example it would be the live23-0-0 bit

Just as if you are a sky customer in the UK the DNS result is 02de16ac.bb.sky.com(at least for nearby anyway)

And only anyone in the nearby residence using the same exchange box would also have that exact same crap at the start.

So you could ban people using that, unless the entire populace of renegade in the UK all played on the same street.

Please correct me if im wrong, no one ever explained it to me, I just concluded that lololol

Also using hamachi you cant keep a stable connection it would still lag like crazy, since at the end of the day its a free service, and isn't totally dependant on your internet connection, it also depends on the hamachi servers to, and again, since its free, its not as if they are going to be providing that kind of connection to every user

Hamachi I believe not exactly sure how it works but it would make sense because you don't have to opens port is client - hamachi server - server. But I also believe it can be client - your server and it just uses the hamachi server for the sever list like xwis and renegade. Didn't exactly put too much effort into looking into that.

It also depends on the ISP. If you ban the first 2 numbers you usually ban the whole ISP of a large portion of it. My ISPs dynamic ip changes the whole thing completely oddly enough if you disconnect your router for an hour. For the DNS i use openDNS that's not my ISPs default DNS. That's also not the DNS server you're looking at that's the hostmask the server puts on it to help identify the client DNS server resolves names to numbers

Example google.com -> 255.255.255.255:80

If every one of the 7 things I've said failed you could always steal your neighbors Internet or crack the WEP encryption using Linux since WEP is easily broken.

Azazel's IP, as far as I can see, has always started with those numbers. They seem to be quite static. The last bit makes sure it's IPs from that ISP that get kicked, so not people that happen to have a similar IP but are not from that provider. The middle part was a guess, but it seemed like a part associated with his latest IPs from what I found in the IPDB. It's set so the chances that someone else get's auto-kicked are slim, though not impossible. Chiefpower and Mandai are banned in a similar fashion on most servers (all?).

It's not actually implemented though, Azazel. I don't know Azazel and I don't think I have any beef with you either, but I know the history from say say. That's all.

all you need to know is he was the most anti-cheating person in the history of renegade when a player was suspected of cheating in a ren tournament he went totally apeshit and harassed the fuck out of them; it turns out that player was innocent and he himself had been cheating all along he went on the Exodus server and harassed them with the whole "failadus" thing, telling them that they all suck and cheating his ass as he did he repeatedly claimed how bad cheaters are and that they should basically be crucified and killed for ruining this great game he said that he was a mod to catch these cheating faggots, and when people accused him of cheating he would deny it to the grave

i honestly am surprised he didn't kill himself after it all went down; my only conclusion is that he continuously lies to himself and thinks he was always just really good and that people only told themselves he cheated so they could sleep at night, and that he only got caught cheating by accident and that he had only just started cheating and that it was all just a horrible misunderstanding that blemished his great name and legacy he's one of the biggest hypocrites in the history of this game every time i see him post a part of me wishes i could knock his teeth out another part feels immense pity and knows i couldn't do it he's the most human form of a parasite, and though there's probably numerous reasons for that they are neither here nor there; i just wish he would cut his losses and go away

But I do understand him being in the Netherlands and not knowing about AT&T's (major US wireless company) hostmask and hold no bitterness to him.

Brandon, alot of good moderators for Renegade do not have lives. They have the time to link your nicks/ips/serials/pc hash together to form a decent conclusion of who you'd be.

Finding out who you are(with a new IP) is not all that hard. Banning a region of your ISP or the whole ISP is easy as well.

They've got quite abit of tools at their disposal for keeping out the bad guys. The best is the collaboration between moderators and another server's moderators in sharing information.

LOL DNS does port numbers now. Sweet. And using your neighbor's internet connection over WiFi doesn't help much if he's on the same ISP as you.

I find it easier to not cheat and therefore not get banned from shit.

Yeah I actually listed all those situations in evading the bans actually lol. (Server administrator) Its still very easy to exploit a ban unless its a hardware hash and not mac address (changeable on some cards) but I didn't know ren supported sending computer identification hashes those are a bit tricky unless you run the game under a virtual pc/wine in linux but whats the point in that.

EDIT: Well, I guess you can use cheat engine and modify the computer hash the game sends unless its encrypted then you'll have to break that first. Moderator with no life Vs. Computer Programmer with no life = nightmare.

And yes I accidently leaked DNS 2.0 to the public. The new DNS resolves port numbers because people with retarded browsers don't pick up the port and returns connection refused. Its going to be implemented on Ipv10 (bullshitting.)

But Crimson is right. cheating is bad and highly annoying but rarely bans are unless if the user is smart. Luckily, its Renegade.

Okay, I think you're on the correct track; however we can further improve upon this method:
Once you obtain his phone number CONTINUIOUSLY call him, thus tying up his phone lines and preventing him from contacting his provider.
