Is it possible to access the forums anymore? I went to main site today and there is no link to the forums anywhere on the page...

They were definitely there a month ago, the site went down for "maintenance" a couple of weeks ago and now it's this. Going to /forum or /forums manually doesn't seem to help anything, either.

I hope he still has all the posts from that forum. They were always super helpful.

I removed the forums due to inactivity, and to allow us to have more accurate statistics for our website. Unfortunately forums draw most traffic from web crawlers and bots, and its very hard to see what traffic is legitimate.

The most important information on the forums will be brought back through pages on our website, and we are working on a way to still let people be involved with discussions.

Was there a particular feature of the forums you are specifically needing?

A message from admin..

Quote:Unfortunately we set an expiration date on how long we would continue to expose Renegade content on the forums. DCOM Productions has not been affiliated with gaming in any way for several years now since we legally established as a software business.

However, all is not lost. I am working on handing the database over to a 3rd party who may continue to host that content. Details are being worked out and may take some time, but it is an issue that is currently being addressed, because I understand the important of the content that was removed.

I will make an official announcement once all the details have been agreed upon, and a final decision has been made.

I am working to finish working out the details as soon as possible, so stay tuned for an update soon.
