Hello. As instructed I installed the TT 4.0 client, only to start my Renegade up with a screen that has the same resolution size I had set up... but with the actual game screen not filling up the entirety of my PC's screen. I figured I would fix that later, and wanted to make sure my login worked, so I attempted to log in, and entered my password in incorrectly. Now, I can't seem to log out. Every time I click the advanced servers button, it attempts to log me in, tells me I have an invalid password (I had told it to save my password) and now sits stagnant with no servers available. Perhaps you guys could help me with the screen and login issue. Thanks.

register: <http://xwis.net/forums/> log in: <http://xwis.net/game-account/> should be able to register your serial then and manage usernames and reset your password

yeah its dumb

There is an executable in the Renegade install folder called WWConfig.exe use that to change the settings for resolution etc..

Ingame

To stop the auto login, you need to extend the left menu before the server listing page and select "my information" and deselect the "automatically log me into this account" then try logging in again, this time the popup will reappear, simply press the delete button and try again..

Thanks for the help. I fixed the login issue! As for the resolution issue, I can change the resolution for the Renegade screen, but the game screen as a whole is still the same size. My computer res. is set to 1920x1080, and the game screen used to fill all that- until I installed the TT 4.0 client. Now it only fills the middle of the screen.

When you get ingame it will fill the entire screen. The menus just aren't widescreen.

I suggest downloading a program called RenList, it's a server browser utility that allows you to join servers without using XWIS, it's easier than using XWIS and you don't need to launch the game to check servers. It also shows the real player count of servers if you use the GSA tab of the utility.
