I've resigned from the server owner forum because most of the co-server owners in there seem to prefer to keep people out that actually contribute to the community with even code- and bug-fixes and the likes.

Instead of allowing (co)Server Owners in there with a good reputation they let their personal feelings, bias, and 'poo i dont like that guy' attitude get in the way of it.

That is all.

Just because.

And to let the very few people that noticed me posting there and reading that i've stopped doing so.

As for the whole resigning thing, you're not going to accomplish anything by it. The guy isn't even a server owner in the first place, never mind the other reasons that were given.

Nice try, Ethenal.

I think I am being very fair. I find it offensive to have my post misconstrued and pushed into the realms of genuine anti-Semitism.

I merely wrote on where a certain idea originated. If I were to tell you how I, a brown-skinned Tamil from a strange land you have never heard about can speak and write English, I would point to the European trade excursions of your forefathers that resulted in what you are seeing in me today. If I were a pure Tamil thinking with a pure Tamil mind, my thoughts would be so alien to you that you wouldn't understand anything. Let's not start about the language barrier.

The cultural devastation and the benefits that occur when two alien societies clash is something to be loathed and admired at the same time.

Likewise, Munzer's quote was simply a reflection of the state of European society at the start of the 20th Century and the immense role of the Jewish cultural impact on the development of Western society.

It is bad taste to dismiss that as a "Jewlluminati conspiracy." Even for a joke.
