I would write Greg email every now and then when i was stuck with a serious problem with modding Renegade - and he always answered - which in itself - something you would hope all game makers would do.

Anyway - when WestWood closed - i found out he resigned -- so i sent him an email expressing all our best wishes for him and his own - and told him we would keep this game alive -- he was kind enough to send the following reply:

Quote: Hey Bobby, good job with the mod faq and thanks for the kind words. I am really glad that a lot of people had and are having a lot of fun with Renegade. It is still weird to think that Westwood is gone because its all I've known for the past 7.5 years.

take it easy,

So - please - tip your cup to 'Greg Hjelstrom' - for it was his hard work that made modding Renegade possible.

And - please - try to help keep the community alive --- before you flame or get stupid - ask yourself - "will this help the community?"

Because - if you allow yourself to fall into the depths of flames/trolldom - this game and community will just be dust.....

It's sad to see Greg resign, but he will definately move onto bigger and better things.

I learnt this recently and by posting this I am maybe helping the community...

If you flame, spam or just act stupid you will lose not only your respect, fun and free conscious but also you may lose the community altogether...

Flameing benefits nobody and certainly has more negative effects than good remember we all are here for the same reason which is Renegade so just try to help each other rather than just causing each other greif.

I bow to his programmer godlikeness. I don't think he'll remain unemployed for too long, unless he wants to of course!
