I'm no newbie but I gotta admit those tips are good...

Would recommend them to anybody just starting out or anyone who is still clinging on to the basics.

Those are really helpful tips. I knew most of them, but only after learning them the hard way--new players should take notice.

One other small tip comes to mind:

If you are an engineer who's out in the field repairing tanks, the C button (crouch) will make you a smaller target if you're standing behind the tanks. It's no cure-all for those mean old snipers, but it helps--you can still move side to side while crouching. It also reduces the risk of splash damage.

Quote:By default, the "0" key lets you choose the C4 as a weapon. If you find this key too hard to reach, I suggest you remap it to something more closely to your fingers. That helped a great deal for me, since once you're used to using C4, it'll come handy to be able to get to it quickly.

Uhhh...the default is "9" :rolleyes:
