Alright so heres my vehicle Well actually mines white and has a sick cap on it (I cant take pics cuz for some odd reason my diggy isnt working (only works when plugged in even if I do have brand new batteries in it but w/e) But heres a pic of this guys interior Now replace that cd player with a cassette/radio. Exactly the same except for that. Now I was just wondering what kind of cd player I should get(you guys are all smart)and inform me on brackts and shiz you need to get (becase im not to "system" savvy) and here are the speakers he has(I need to replace mine cuz they sound like crud.....darn factory ones)Now where he has those tubed speakers I have little square ones. Now I was wondering how do I replace them anyone know howthe simple way? Cuz I dont feel like having to spend money on having someone install it cuz im a cheap lil you know what.....and I would love to learn. Also I will try to get the pics of my actual truck up in here if I can get this darn diggy to work. But mine has a brand new engine and somewhat new tranny. It runs so sweet, and its got a lot of power even though it doesn't look like it would. I beat my friend in a race with his 89 camero (and he souped it up) But im sure he was just playing with me on that one though Thanks for any help!

Sir PhoenixxHmmm...

Save up your money and get a real car (or truck). That was by far the dumbest remark Ive ever heard.... Anyways why would I do that when its got a brand new engine and a somewhat new tranny in it. These trucks are actually far better and built much better then they look(and specially since there jeeps).....

kawolskyDo you drive away and get lagged back through a wall?

lol...

I kinda drove straight in to a wall, don't think lag had anything to do with that though...

My dad just took his car to the local Halfords and they helped him chose a wicked cd player and fitted it for him and now his is ace...

As for replacing the speakers I belive you should take it to a garage if your not to sure about it bacause it can get kinda tricky and when I saw my dad mwss with the insides of his doors he had a hell of a problem getting it all back together again.
