Ok, let's see....

We keep getting hit by tornadoes every year, and every 5 years we get wiped out. But hey! The taxes are low. Let's keep building the same damn thing over and over, not learn from our mistakes, and oh yeah, let's throw in a trailer park or 15. They are really sturdy in a tornado.

BUILD UNDERGROUND, DUMBASSES!!!

They should have thought about where a tornado path was before they built houses :rolleyes:

dude...the mole people scare me

You cant avoid building in a tornado path...otherwise no one would live in Oklahoma, kansas or Nebraska (as opposed to the 50 in each now)

They should look into domes when building new houses and small buildings. A dome's shape gives it great strength verses square buildings.

(as in, create the entire building round like a dome)

Or they could just stop building trailer parks..... :rolleyes:

That is the main problem....

Yes, to solve the problem we should get rid of poor people.

Lol, I seriously have a hard time feeling sorry for these people. Every year they rebuild their house and say "Ghosh darnit Sarrah, it done snuck up on me there." If you can't see it coming year after year then you've truly lost hope. But not like I'm in any place to insult a states intelligence level - I live in Florida where the brain power of a single old fart can't punch a hole in a card.

Ironic how the most unstable housing is built in some of the most dangerous areas isn't it?
