I did a search but couldn't find the thread. Who made the fully poseable Havoc model? And can this same skeletal model be used to animate other renegade characters/

He is talking about a havoc that was edited sgt. May. sgt. May boned the face and added fingers, making facial expressions and custom hand positions possible.

I remember that it was released, and posted on the forums. It should be here somewhere........

It's at the Mod Exchange http://modx.renevo.com/showthread.php?s=&threadid=157 I remeber readin the original thread that was in some other forum about what he was doing. Sgt.May said that he was working on a female character skeleton. He said that the skeleton could be used in other models but it may need adjustments.

What type of file is it?

I thought that you could import .w3d in to 3ds max.

the only way i could see you putting it in max would be to export to w3d, and then use the w3d
importer to import it into max

Yeah, but what kind of file is it in the first place. Once you download it (other than .zip or .rar.)?

gmax. A gmax file can be converted, it requires a lot of jiggery poker with the Quake 3 tempest gamepack and the MD3 format. Basically you open your gmax file, save it as MD3, import that MD3 into 3DS. I know someone who did it but i'm not sure if it works with bones and it's a completely different format. As far as I know it does work with geometry. But the W3D sounds the best option.
