ok...to get away from the war, although this will most likely turn into a discussion flaming me and saying I hate the president, I thought I'd start a thread about the draft. I have never heard any of the good points...and as is right now, I dont see how you could be for it. to me, it seems blatantly un-American. The draft is being forced to fight for ideals you dont believe in. I know if you can prove your a pacifist...they'll just send you to a hospital or non-combat position...but how can you say we're entitled to our own opinions...but we have to fight for those of the country even if we dont believe in them?

I'm not biting on this one.

If you have as much concept of civic duty and loyalty backed up with action as I think you do, you would never understand.

Never in your lifetime.

Not everything in life is politically correct, and negotiable. Action solves problems, not pacifism.

Duke,

There is no draft. In all reality there will probably never be a draft again. Also, most countries in the world require you to serve 18 months to 2 years in their military. So what brought this up?

Your 3rd world books are out of date. Get a new book on America and read about the strongest and one of the largest

ALL VOLUNTEER MILITARIES in the world.

If people value their freedom they will join the military to help spread the gift of freedom. If they are lazy leaches like your self and would rather have other people die for them, I guess that is their right. Why is it, every time the US has any kind of a conflict, the anti war/conflict groups start the "Draft Re-opened" rumor? Reason: They have no other ammuniton. They try to terrorize the public with slogans like; "Another Vietnam" and "Draft Re-opened"! They have no real facts, so they prey on the fears of the weak.

I served because I love my freedom and my country. I did not join for college money. As a matter of fact I got my 2 degrees with my own money. Not the GI bill.

I knew this conversation would require you to be more mature than you could possibly ever be. I never said the draft was reinstated...although there have been people in Congress trying to get it reinstated because they think there's to many black people in the military.

and again you continue assuming that the only people that benifit America are the ones that would kill their enemies. That sickens me...just as it has sickened so many other people...including the great Albert Einstein.

If you think you're all high and mighty...then fucking explain why the draft is a good thing. I'm really interested as to why someone would and I'm asking for your opinion. So stop being a jackass for the fucking sake of it and tell me why it's a good thing to be forced to fight for something you dont believe in. Tell me how that's freedom.

I want to know names of the politicians wanting to reinstate the draft. You can't provide any. Why, you may ask? Because it would be political suicide. You have no idea what you are talking about. You never lived it. Kirby and I were there.

There is no draft, and I do not see one coming in the future.

The reason there is no draft is that draftees actually reduce the effectiveness of a modern army. A modern army wants professionals who spend years and years of their lives training, not poorly motivated cannon fodder. As has been proven in every war since WWI, good equipment and training is worth far more than numbers.

Subject: the draft

Posted by bigwig992 on Fri, 23 May 2003 02:51:11 GMT

Technically there is still a draft. There isn't a point for it though because:

1. We have enough volunteers.
2. Our troops are the best trained in the world (yes, they are, argue if you want, but you can't argue with results).
3. No need for all the extra troops.

Now, the founding father's created the draft, it was, and still (technicly) is in effect. It is the DUTY of a citizen of the United States to serve in the military in time of war. Not saying it's a good thing for all the people who are against it, but come on. If you don't like the draft, simply move to Canada.

And Duke, your really starting to piss me off. Every time you insult America, it's "interest", it's people, and it's military, it reminds me of September 11th. Now if you think we are "over-doing" things, go call up some terrorist, and ask them to fly a jumbo-jet into your tallest fucking building. Don't we still have the right to be mad? I can predict what your going to say:

"no, your just bossing around the world, bush wants to take over the world and use all of iraq's oil"
:rolleyes:

Back to the subject, the draft will probley not happen again, not when you have people like my brother () out there because he choose to join and fight for everyone's freedoms.

If you think asking a question about the draft and stating that being FORCED, legally, to fight for an ideal you dont believe in, whether it happens again or not (probably wont), saying that makes you a terrorist, then I guess I'm guilty. I never once praised Bin Laden...I think we did the right thing taking him out...

Without people that use their freedoms...your brother would be out there killing and dying for nothing. The Consitution has proven time and time again that it is flawed...and our forefathers set it up so that those flaws could be fixed for a reason. I never once insulted America. I love this country...dispite its flaws there are people that would chose to make it a better place to live. People that realize it's not perfect and will do everything they can to make it better. That is what makes this country so great. You're right...without the military...we would be taken over and have lost our freedoms...but without people like me...they'd be out there dying for nothing.

there is actually 1 congressman(i think from newjersey but not sure) who wanted to reinstate the draft. i'm not sure if he ever got around to actually drafting the bill or not. his reason was not "because there are too many blacks in the military" it was because he was against the war in iraq and he figured that if politician's sons were going to be forced to serve, then congress and the president would be less likely to start wars.

now, as for duke's question of "why the draft" no one likes the idea of the draft because it puts inexperienced soldiers on the battlefield and that risks lives. but if we were at war and did not have enough soldiers to fight, then a draft would be necessary.

it would be waaay too embarassing to have to go tell china "dude, i know you want to take over the us, but, duke and his friends don't want to fight... can we postpone this war till the next generation comes of age? i don't think they will be such spineless pieces of shit" when it comes to defending this country, the draft and anything else that helps us win should be and will be instated.

personally, i have never served in the military, but i am quite proud of my father's 20 years in the airforce and if the draft were necessary again to defend the usa, i would not wait for my number to be called, i would volunteer and serve proudly if they would have me.

If you don't believe in this country and what it fights for you shouldn't live here. If you do then you wont mind fighting for it. Sometimes the army might be lacking in numbers especially in a larger war. The only way to increase its numbers is by initiating a draft. This is a last resort sort of thing and wont be done unless necessary for the survival of this country and its people but is completely acceptable to me and all loyal Americans. If you don't like the idea that any day when you are needed they can come to the door and ask you to go, leave the friggin country

The Korean War was a good cause, despite what socialist assholes may think. North Korea invaded South Korea, which is obviously wrong.

The Vietnam War was a good cause, same reason for the Korean War. Look, I may not agreee with EVERYTHING Lindin(sp?) Johnson (Nixon was not the bad guy) did, but does that make the entire war was WRONG? No.

The North Vietnamese violated the Geneva Convention SEVERAL times. What did the UN do? Nothing. The Viet Cocks would purposely kill medics; they'd set up booby traps and hid in holes like cowards.

But, of course, WE are the ones to blame, right? God Forbid we defend someone elses freedom. God Forbid we cared about the South Vietnamese, right? :rolleyes:

Yah, the NVA violated the Geneva convention all over the place, stting traps for medics, killing villages that would not support them, shooting downed airmen, etc, but that is noting new. The Koreans did the same things, and the Japanese trained their troops to yell "corpsman"(the Marine equivalent of a medic) just to wipe out every medic they could reach.

Also, I believe that the simple abandonment of the South Vietnamese was just wrong, especially when we really knew about the political "purges" that would follow (simply because that is what every communist government since the dawn of time has done when taking over new territory).

Duke, learn your history. The Union invaded the Confederacy because it broke away from a sovereign state. Korea wasn't a state before the Korean war, it was territory conquered by Japan. The commies then took over the north and set up a government there, and the U.S. took the south and set up a government there. The North decided that it wanted it all, and invaded with the help of other foreign powers. There is NO comparison to the American Civil War.

Korea broke away but was a country for a short period of time before it broke into two parts, north and south. However, what we were trying to do is to free those that wanted freedom but could not due to outside powers. No matter how you look at it, that should be the ultimate goal of the US. Ummmm. Does anyone remember Fort Sumter?

April 12, 1861 - At 4:30 AM Confederates under General Pierre Beauregard open fire with 50 cannons upon Fort Sumter in Charleston, South Carolina. The Civil War begins.

July 21, 1861 - The Union Army under Gen. Irvin McDowell suffers a defeat at Bull Run 25 miles southwest of Washington. Confederate Gen. Thomas J. Jackson earns the nickname "Stonewall," as his brigade resists Union attacks. Union troops fall back to Washington. President Lincoln realizes the war will be long. "It's damned bad," he comments.

So Duke your Third World education fails you again. The South fired the first shots. It took 2 months before the Union sent its army in the the south.

A-Level History

American Civil War: Overview

Important features

The two main theatres of land warfare

West of Appalachians centring on Mississippi

East of Appalachians centring on the area between the rival capitals Washington and Richmond
Strategy and tactics

This is often called the first modern war.

By the 1860s muskets with rapid fire and rifled barrels (accurate range of 600 yards instead of previous 60) were changing the nature of land warfare. They could easily destroy drilled infantry still advancing in close formation as in the Napoleonic Wars. At Gettysburg defenders in secure positions shot Pickett's disastrous charge to pieces and ensured it was the last display of old-style tactics.

Until 1863 warfare was dominated by an army's need to maintain a line of communication with its supply base. But Grant and Sherman in the South showed the terrible effectiveness of striking into enemy territory and living off the land, the invaders plundering and devastating it as they marched.

At sea, warfare was in transition. Steam was replacing sail and both sides experimented with ironclad ships.

Casualties

Half a million men were killed.

Resources

Most advantages were with the Union

an organised government

twice the manpower of the South

most of the industry

command of the seas (hence successful blockade of South)The Confederacy had one main advantage

it was the world's main supplier of cotton

Fast Forward

1861 Southern states withdraw (secede) from the Union on election of anti-slavery president

Lincoln

1861 Feb Provisional government of Confederacy is set up with Jefferson Davis as President

1861 April Confederacy starts war by attacking Fort Sumter, Union garrison in Southern territory

1861 July At 1st battle of Bull Run in Virginia Confederate general 'Stonewall Jackson' holds off Union forces

1862 September Confederate general Lee's attempted invasion of North is defeated at Antietam in Virginia 1862 Union executes pincer movement on Confederacy west of Appalachians - Grant defeats Confederates at Shiloh in North and Farragut captures New Orleans in South

1863 July Lee's second invasion of North is defeated at Gettysburg in Pennsylvania, spelling beginning of end for Confederacy

1863 May-July Grant takes Union army down Mississippi and captures Confederate stronghold of Vicksburg, cutting South in two

1864 July-Dec Sherman invades Georgia and burns Atlanta - his 'march to the sea' bisects South again

1864 Grant wears down Lee's reserves and besieges Richmond

1865 Sherman invades Carolinas while Grant drives Confederates from Richmond

1865 April Lee surrenders at Appomattox

March 3, 1963 - The U.S. Congress enacts a draft, affecting male citizens aged 20 to 45.

Was this a bad use of the draft Duke? :rolleyes: To free people enslaved.

You said no good ever came out of the draft. Well tell that to millions of African-Americans out there.

Quote:The Confederacy had one main advantage
it was the world's main supplier of cotton

Actually, the Confederacy's main advantage was the amount of military genius they had working for their side(Lee, Forrest, etc.) and the Unions's inability to find competent leadersheap until much later in the war.

Fort Sumter was a military base in a different country that was being heavily resupplied...as if they were about to attack. The South was MORE justified in attacking that than we were in attacking Iraq.

We started out in Korea and Vietnam in good name...but after some time we were only in there because we didn't want Communism to spread...not because we wanted to help them.

Here is a little analogy for you Duke.

The South viewed the North as a threat to their security, so they attack the fort... Right? And you justify that unprovoked attack. Remember the North didn't fire the first shot. Don't start rewriting history now...

Well the same can be said about the Iraqi war.

The US saw Iraq as a threat to our security and the world. So we attacked.

Yet you say it is wrong. Why is that? Don't give the old "They are on the otherside of the world" line. Terrorism has no borders anymore.

first of all, the south was wrong for seceding from the union in the first place. we can not and will not allow states to split away from the united states. it would undermine our security and our economy.

secondly, iraq was not a preemptive strike. they started a war, we kicked their ass, they agreed to terms of cease-fire, they violated those terms of cease-fire we got a new un resolution laying out certain terms violation of which would have severe consequences, they violated those terms, we attacked.

third, the draft is still a necessary thing available to the us forces should it be needed.

Read the whole fucking post you dumbass. I said it was an analogy, a theory. Because you said the South was right to do the pre-emptive strike against the North, because they felt the North was a threat. Yet you think the US was wrong in striking Iraq. We felt Iraq was a threat to the US and the world. Remember, terrorism has no boundries anymore.

FYI! The civil rights movement in the 1960's has often been refered as the "2nd Civil War". And I do know the date of the real Civil War. I also know that Iraq didn't have a fort in Virginia. Iraq didn't even exist. Please do all of us a favor and get a clue in what you're talking about. Go to a library and read before you post. And for Gods sake! My comment about Vietnam still being two countries was a mistake as well...I was thinking Korea when I wrote it, as I have stated many times but the almighty Kirby keeps throwing it back in my face

I also know that Iraq didn't have a fort in Virginia.

clap clap clap congrats, you can catch on to sarcasm now, you must be growing up :rolleyes:

Iraq was either a strike that was way too late or a pre emptive strike. The war ended a decade ago. Terrorism never had any boundries. Nothing has changed in that in decades. Do you remember the OKC bombing? Honestly...the only thing that's changed is that one group launched a Jihad against the US and was beaten severely, which I agree with fully.

and Kirby...just because you say I got owned every 5 minutes does not make it so ahh well still war was never declared and it never broke apart and yes I do know what a civil war is but it was never a civil war. Now to get back to the draft. If the draft is ever reinstated then the same thing that happened during the vietnam war will probably happen again though if the war does have strong backing to it like world war two did then it won't happen.

The draft is there in case of a war that would be the scale of something like WWII. It is not really necessary anymore considering we can obliterate countries and not even have to go outside anymore. Even if that happened, this country has so many lazy slobs that take advantage of everything they can in it, that Canada's population would double if there was a draft. I do not like the idea of death, but I would serve if called upon, unlike most of this country gone wrong. Want to know why they wanted to reinstate the draft? Some racist ass senators thought it would be nice to "have some white boys get their asses shot so everything will be equal". Its nothing more than an extension of that affirmative action bullshit that causes so many problems. Its nothing more than giving people unfair chances and making the racial divide even wider. The draft will never come into play really. We are so far superior to any country that we can take a war by ourselves. The only reason we ask for allies to get them to help with the costs and be the clean up crew.

fucking ass out. That pisses me off more than anything. These fucking people who sit around and collect welfare, or sue people for ridiculous shit, or try and tell other people how to raise children and try to tell them that they cant watch TV, or play video games.

there are countries like France where you will fit in just right, with the rest of the stinking trash.

you are wrong, the senator that wanted it reinstated was a black veteren(from newjersey i think) democrat who wanted it reinstated because he was against the war and figures that if senators sons had to go to war, they would be less likely to vote to attack anyone in the future. he was an idiot and will probably not be re-elected.
