Often when i play renegade lately, i'll get into an online game, play for a while, and then the game will exit out completely. No warning or error messages. Just a complete shut out. It has not always been that way, but now it seems to be happening more frequently. The same problem seems to happen to Warcraft 3. Could someone please enlighten me on this problem? It would be much appreciated.

Thanks

What are the specs on your computer? The same thing happened to me until I get a new video card

I have a Pentium III processer, NVIDIA GeForce II MX graphics card, about 512 RAM, Windows 98, and a 20-30 gig of space (Currently down to 2 gigs on both my C and D drives). I feel so obsolete. Hopefully (If my dad keeps his word) We'll trash this POS and get a better one. But, It may be late summer, so I don't want to wait that long. And as I said before, it was fine before but it is progressively gotten worse. Like now, I can't play for more than 2-3 minutes without it crashing.

hmmm you could try re-installing renegade and giving your self a fresh start.

Or, you could hit it with a base ball bat 100 times and toss it in a lake

I've already tried reinstallation. It may be trouble with DirectX 9.0a i downloaded, but you can't uninstall that. So... here are some other things i figured out,

1.Happens in all games i have, online or offline.

2. Many "Illegal Operation" errors deal with a file ending with ".dll"

3. Hitting with baseball bat 100 times and throwing into lake does relieve anger, but it seemed to make the problem worse, and caused others. Including; Harddrive failure, refusal to boot up, constant shorts, power surges, damaged hardware, and complete destruction of video card and soundcard to name a few.

Hmmm....I'll just probably just wipe the memory. That would solve any problem. heh heh.
