There were so many different threads complimenting the new forums and all the work that went into it... I didn't want to bump them all with "you're welcome", etc... so I'm saying it here.

I spent probably a good 10-12 hours working with the various phpBB files to get it to look like "home", and I'm about 60% done, enough to "go live"... but I know there's a lot more to change. Smilies, avatars, some gaps in the styles, missing/ugly images...

In the next few days, all the little visual glitches should go away, and I'll be re-adding support for the "other features" we need, such as avatars, and my personal favorite, the Member Ranking.

Please stay tuned and be patient with me, and I will get this place in tip-top condition. I'm also evaluating the need for moderators to cover the times Blazer and I have a life, and sleep. I have more offers for moderators than I can possibly fill, and I want the community to select who they want/trust for these few positions (I'm thinking 2-3 to start).

Anyway, those are my few rambling thoughts before I shuffle off to bed. Thanks again for helping make this such a positive rollover.

Ummm your welcome?!?

It doesn't feel right saying that. Since I haven't really done anything.

Thank you seems much more appropriate.

I wasn't planing to register since you couldn't keep the accounts but after I saw this I decided starting over was worth it. It is almost the exact same thing. If it was anything less you wouldn't be seeing me.

It's nice to see these new forums up and working. Although I was never able to post on them (damn Westwood said I was too young to enter ), it's going to be great to see all of the Renegade community come together in here.
