Well, its an FPS, YR is an RTS (I think).

Plus it doesnt have all the cheats and the losers who get all their butt buddies to page you to hell when your winning.

Because it's an arcade FPP and once you play it you are better than b4 and you want to play it again, and again and you are better and better and you attempt to be the best and you just love it!

With C&C you could run down a squad of minigunners with an ST. Now you can do it to real people.

You know the real appeal, of course is the multiplayer.

I tried the first-person version of this game and it was awful. Intermediate graphics, directed gamplay, Bah!

Multiplay is where this software can wow you.

I still think BF1942 is far superior. I mean, Naval units, fixed-wing aircraft, Subs and everything is FREE!

Of course, it's twice as resource-intensive, so I still play Renegade a lot. *sigh* 900Mhz just doesn't cut it anymore.

Renegade is also a lot cheaper at the store, plus there's Renegade Alert coming out soon.

Naval units and Subs can be easily put into Renegade. I don't know about making them fly for real, but you can make fixed-wing aircraft for Renegade. The last part is considerably stupid...

How exactly is Renegade inferior to BF1942 because you have to purchase your vehicles? What, BF1942 doesn't have a money system? But Renegade does, now how does that make BF1942 superior? If anything, that would make Renegade more superior.

Lol... I'm sure you meant 'single player version'.
