i have this problem that seems to be getting steadily worse, every once and a while i get an error message that says for me to save all my work and says that the system must shut down due to a remote protocol procedure and it gives me 60 seconds. i think it might have to do with that anti worm protection i removed but it has happened before..

ahh its happening right now!!!

Do a search of your system to see if you can find msblast.exe... You probably have that worm that has been going around.

Check this page. it has a tool that supposedly removes the worm from your computer. No guarantees though, i dont have the worm, and have not tested these methods.

You might have the w32.blaster.worm file which keep shutting down your computer. If you have it OR you think you might have it then do this:

Download the FixBlast.exe file from:

<http://securityresponse.symantec.com/avcenter/FixBlast.exe>

To keep the PC from rebooting while running this fix... do a CTRL+ALT+DEL Goto Task Manager and end the process on msblast.exe.

After you run the fix, go to windows updates to patch up your system

<http://windowsupdate.microsoft.com/>

j4S[p]So, Saturday is when the Hackers/Virus Maker's release their worms?

No, it's when the Windows Update site will be attacked.
