WTF! I got up this morning and made myself some breakfast. My breakfast consisted of one bagel with creamcheese with some smoke turkey on top, an apple, and a coffee. Now everything went fine until i got to the apple. I started eating the apple and almost emmediately my lips and gums started to feal weird. It's hard to explain but it was a very uncomfortable fealing. I think I am allergic to apples or something cause my lips started swelling. Several minutes later I started choking and now I can barely talk because I think my throat is swollen. I have noticed this "weird allergic fealing" from eating apples before, but I have never had it this bad. What the hell! Stupid apples. won't be eating any more of those.

I think i'm ok now cause the swelling has subsided, but I still feal like I have something lodged in my throat, lol. Going to see my doctor would probably just be a waste of time. What would he say? Don't eat any more apples, lol. Yeah thks doc I already figured that one out.

Yeah, a severe allergic reaction is nothing to mess around with... next time it could be anaphalactic shock = death...

I guess an apple a day may actually cause the doctor to stay

Lol IceSword, I wasn't asking for a doctor to come to my house and give me cpr. I just fealt like sharing my interesting morning with the rest of u since I was planning on playing Renegade after breakfast. The events of the sour apple hindered my ability to play Renegade after breakfast, but not anymore.
