I used to have the radio commands in Latin (I think...) on my other computer, but I lost them when I got my new one.

Since the radio commands are way over used, and because it is pointless, I was wondering, does anyone knows where to get the radio commands in another language?

It's sad because I know what they all say.

(Second Year Latin)

They're hard to translate though, since there's many different words for different things. "Hostis visus sum!" and "Inimicus aspicio!" could both be replacements for "Enemy spotted!" but they're completely different.

Although, literally they mean "The enemy has been seen!" and "I see the enemy!", and hostis would be a national enemy where inimicus is more of a personal enemy.
