Making C4 bright means you're looking to make it easier to disarm it. Therefore, it's basically cheating, you're giving yourself an advantage over others that you wouldn't normally have through gameplay experience.

Does anyone else wonder why Neo's nickname is higher up than the other names are on that screen? It's nearly inside his Raveshaw's head, not by his chest.

What the fuck is with that?

I must say, that after all the cheating stuff started to come up, I got rid of all skins I had. Basically, just to prevent things like this from happening. Just because you don't think it gives an advantage, others may think that it does and accuse you of cheating.

I'm not saying that you should get rid of it, just that I got rid of all my skins, and now I play the game the way it came when I first got it.

It's big chest mode :rolleyes: Seriously probably cause i run different resolution then you. Since when are skins cheats? Anyone can have them, if you want to think they're cheats go right ahead.

In theory though, you could make everything solid white, and really easy to shoot, but that would suck the fun out of the game.

Anyone can have objects.ddb modifications, too. Your logic is based in fallacy.

Uhh whatever lots of people have skins. There is a difference between a slight advantage vs a bullshit advantage like bh or fr. Either way you bitch just like in sniping. You can't hit jack shit so you blame it on twitching and such, everyone does unless you stand still. It's not hard to hit someone moving...well maybe for me but for you it is apparently some sort of challenge.

Never sniped against him I take it... or faced him while he's in an orca for that matter

Sniped against him yes, orca ive seen but that was well over a year ago. I'd probably kill him in a air duel. Depends who is the orca. Orcas own apaches.

Where's your target reticle? Why is the technician looking WAYYYY smaller than usual? [He looks like a running gnome...]

Reply to Aircraftkiller's question: Raveshaw is running, and the characters stoop forward just like a normal person would do when running. He just happened to get a screenshot just when that happened.

Reply to Aprime's question: The recticle is there. He's using the hunting rifle recticle, you just can't see it well because it's green. And the technician seems shorter because he is running (see ACK answer) and because he is running AWAY from Homey.

Everything has a valid explanation. I do not think Homey cheats.

If you've done either recently, then you'd know he can hit plenty... even been accused of cheating himself because of it.
