Stop turning it into a competition, maybe it's not as good as RenAlert, so what? Stop turning down everyone that dares threaten your hold over this community All I've ever seen you do is be hostile to everyone that dares ask you a question, it's only hurting this community, so they make a sucky map, trial and error.

A person who gives out the hub IP of a community IRC server, one of the largest for the C&C community as a whole, is telling me that what I do is bad for this community?

Idiot.

You don't see much beyond these forums. It IS a competition. That is how people get good. That is how you get players to play what you make. Maybe if you actually worked on a game level or modification, you'd see how difficult it is, and understand that people have to compete in order to get their hours of work played.

If it involves bashing Reborn, then that's what it takes. Reborn sucks and almost everyone who's played it has admitted to it.

That's what consumers do. That's why businesses try to improve their product, lest consumers spread the word about how they got ripped off by downloading or purchasing the product in question.

So yes, I would go around saying "THIS SHIT SUCKS" in real life. I do it quite often when I buy something that does, indeed, suck.

Reborn sucks. Therefore I make it my point to have others understand that it sucks. Same as what people do for Renegade Alert, some think it sucks, so they try to convince others that it does too.

You're guilty of the same thing, saying something sucks and getting others not to use it. Idiot.

He's not going out into the street and yelling that it sucks, he's bringing it up during a conversation with others. Since you want to compare an internet forum/chatroom to real life, here's a tidbit of information you can use. A conversation involves a group of people comming within 'voice range' to communicate. Just as with all other group conversations you join in, you have the option of continuing to listen to it, or go onto another conversation. Same hting applies here, except each conversation is reffered to as a thread. Don't like what this one is going to be saying, don't participate in it.

I know, you don't understand right now, I didn't either, but lemme tell you, the reason why I never really came back minus reading a couple of posts here and there when I'm bored at night is becuase I realized that its all a huge waste of time accomplishing absolutely nothing.

Ah yes... lets go a step further and stop the gaming industry altogether! It's all a waste of time anyways... someone using their time and effort to provide entertainment for others is a complete waste of time! But wait... lets not stop there, lets get rid of the entertainment industry itself! The world could be a lot more productive if no one bothered to stop for trivial entertainment!

Ok, lets rephrase this: Its immature and stupid to be fighting over a game. The gaming industry is a huge thing, lots of money, but Renegade isn't a money maker anymore, I mean if you were actually getting paid for what you do, then it would seem a bit more worthy to try and bust down any competition...

Jon -- I never said I was better than anyone, I may not waste time on gaming, but I still waste all my time and money on something else, just that it is a much more physical hobby that costs a whole lot more, lol. I'm in no way better, if not worse, just see the whole thing is being immature and pretty retarded. I mean, what really makes some graphics and scripting better than another set of scripting and graphics coming from a different set of imaginations? I've played both RenAlert, and Reborn, both mods have their ups and downs, and I really don't have a favourite. RenAlert has some cool stuff, but so does Reborn, it goes both ways.

In all honesty, I don't think I'll really play RenAlert or Reborn later on at all, I haven't touched Renegade in months. I must admit that RenAlert's helicopters are cool, but it stops there, not much else to impress me about the mods.

Bullshit this doesn't make us money. Yeah, I spend a couple hundred a month on n00bstories.com servers with nothing back, but the knowledge gained from working on the site with technical skills and people skills got me a damn good job at Cisco. So it IS in fact making money.

Now ACK does all this mapping not only for fun, but also because he aspires to be employed in the gaming industry one day. Then yes, this will in fact make him money. The fact that he strives to be better than everyone else and succeeds is what will let him beat out another applicant for some job down the road.

Don't sit here and tell us how to live our lives. If we don't think our lives are fulfilling enough, that's our call, not yours. Myself, I spend hours upon hours a week in IRC and the forums and playing Renegade, but that doesn't mean I am not being fulfilled in life. I'm very happy with my life.

If your only argument is "You need to get a life" then you, in fact, have no argument. You're just using ad hominem to say "it doesn't matter what your opinion is because you're just a loser with no life". That's irrelevant to the topic at hand and therefore a waste of time for you to type and us to read.

Honestly, the only thing I don't like about it is the pointless posts like this one, competition is VERY good for buisness, it draws prices down, and quality up, not saying that competition is bad, just saying that the "poisoning of the well" on Aircraftkiller's point is a little immature and not needed, it doesn't help anyone, or accomplish anything.

I'm not here to say that all gamers are loners with no lives, just saying that there are more important things to be arguing about.

Ack, in the real world companies don't call other company's products crap or trash (don't read this literally, please), they don't call eachother names. If they did, the industries would be a lot more hostile. You didn't see Westwood call Blizzard's games sucky, did you?

What does making enemies help you? Gaining experience would be the only benefit you get out of this, while you could make contacts and friends who'd help you in the future when you'll need their help.. You're not the only one trying to get into the game industry, so be careful.

"competition is VERY good for buisness, it draws prices down, and quality up" In some ways I don't think this counts for the game industry: competition decreases development costs and time and with it the quality.. At least for EA that seems to do it.

Ah! A psychic! I would really like to know how you are able to find out what goes on behind the scenes. I never said being childish will get you anywhere, nor have I disagreed with you on that topic. However, you continue to be wrong. Take my commercial example again. How is a company going, "our product is better, all others are inferior. So buy our stuff!", NOT calling other products names? Sure they don't mention the "others" by name, most of the time, but competition is all about saying how much your product is better than the other persons by showing how inferior it is.

At least you stopped your attempt to know how the marketing world works.

Oh, and by the way, people make a living by others complaining about products. Thats how businesses go bankrupt, quality of products increase, and members of any 'better business' company are able to get paid.

Yes that all happens to be correct....

to what ACK said about Reborn sucks.....Yes ACK thinks it sucks and most the people he knows probably think it sucks and they find him -as a person who knows his maps and mods- someone to listen to and take advice off...

But its his opinion he dislikes it, and as a public -keyword- forum he has the right to say this....if you disagree then you say well i disagree i think its ok....but no you and him got engaged in a pissing contest and it leads to childish arguing....He dislikes it, you like it we get the picture.

It turned into a beta. . . they never said it was a beta when they initialy released it now did they? RenAlert doesn't cost any money either, but RenAlert is being sold on a CD for peoploe who do not want to wait several hours to download it though.

To sell the Mod, yes. After all, they are using Renegades Game engine-for profit- without EA's consent.

However...

They can charge any expenses that will not cause EA any financial harm, or violates copyrights.

Able to charge for:

- Shipping and handling
- Cost of the CD and case

Cannot charge for:

- Any costs relating to the production of the modification or the modification itself, regardless of personal cost, including but not limited to labour.
 - Anything made by EA, or with tools supplied by EA. Ie. electronic or physical reproductions where the original idea is owned by EA. (and no, looking nothing like the Red Alert model won't work)
 - Anything not covered in the previous section.

and he is right you dont have proof, but ACK maybe it was his opinion...not trying to argue this, that or the other just saying as little as it counts he is entitled to it warrantoTake my commercial example again. How is a company going, "our product is better, all others are inferior. So buy our stuff!", NOT calling other products names? Sure they don't mention the "others" by name, most of the time, but competition is all about saying how much your product is better than the other persons by showing how inferior it is.

Isn't that EXACTLY what I said? It's the mature WAY they use to tell how other products are inferior, understand? So what's the difference between that and what ACK is doing?

"Our product causes 10 times better results, because.. etc etc" vs. "Reborn sucks (!), a couple of other people think so too!"

"Don't buy the other companies products because it sucks compared to ours"

So how is that not insulting the competition?

But putting that aside... I can only wonder what would happen if there weren't laws preventing competitors in the marketing industry from defaming each other. Maybe it would be like the American election process?

"This person is bad! Look at everything wrong that he did!"

:rolleyes: Man, whom are you quoting? My point is that the word "sucks" isn't being used by those companies, so it's not insulting in the way ACK is insulting Reborn.

I'm not gonna spell this out any further for you, either read and give usefull comments or don't comment at all. And as I said before: stop nitpicking

The diffrence between ACK way and companies is just that companies use more tactic when pointing out that they are better. With as a result that people don't get offended so easily by that company for what they are saying.

ACK is not really known as someone who brings something with a bit of tact, he just says what he thinks. The problem is that although he maybe right sometimes, the way he is bringing it will almost always result in a small flame war.

I think the whole point that Terran Drone is trying to make is:
ACK please use more tact when complaining. People might not take you as serious this way as you want.

Exactly, and Ack, not just because I don't want flame wars (which only tear apart the community), but also for your own good: you're not gonna make friends flaming this and that. Why not telling the people from Reborn how they could improve? No this is not the real professional company life, so you can still help others out. And believe me, you'll need friends in such a competitive industry (people could help you getting a job, people could help you arrange stuff, like a studio or something).

I've been exploring the game industry for a while so believe me when I say making friends is a lot more beneficial than making enemies. I know making enemies is much easier, but just give making friends a try

Who am I quoting? No one. Just because you view commercials in one way (which hapens to be the same way I do) doesn't mean someone won't view them in the way that I've proposed. And yet you STILL fail to understand WHY they don't use words like that. So I'll explain it again.

In the law there is this little thing called defamation that prevents one company from defaming another in an attempt to keep competition healthy. However, if given the chance, one company would bring up the competitions dirty little secrets in an attempt to get the consumer to choose them over the others. How do I know this? There is no shuch defamation law concerning political advertisements (at leasts in the States), and if you've ever seen 99% of Americas political advertisements, they're all about "look what this person voted yes/no on! They're cruel and inhumane! Vote for me because I won't do that". And yes, this is a very toned down replay of the advertisements.

Wow, three times explaining the same thing... and yet your telling me to read?

It's not important why they don't use those words, it's important why ACK shouldn't use those words. He wants to get into the industry, so he shouldn't use such words, he shouldn't react in some ways and he shouldn't judge in some ways. Otherwise he won't come far.

Now I don't need a story about political correctness in America, cause in my country we're being flooded with that hypocrisy. Your story though is true, but Ack's (almost) nothing yet in the real world, so he shouldn't have the attitude as if he's a whole lot. My point is just that making friends, contacts, references etc is better than being an arrogant prick.

Ack can do whatever he wants...

All that will happen is that some may lose respect for him and those he represents over it.

I have the same problem, tact is not in my vocabulary but if he speaks his mind let him, its what he has one for. i do the same and make no appologies....yes it can and does cause arguements and as a result the person themselves maybe an arguementative person, one who is opinionated and wont change what they veiw as this, that or the other.....but it shows character and at least you know they will let you know if they have a problem with you face to face and not call you names when you are not there to defend yourself, coz that alone cheeses me off royaly.

But again we come back to the source....its an opinion and everyone is entitled to their own, and as a public forum, this is where you voice them
