The bible, people say has predicted the rise of hitler, the terrorist attacks, the kenidy assasination, and MANY MORE events in our history. But this information is not in our bibles of today it is a code with in the original language. This code is basicaly a aragment of letters to spell out a word such as in diagonal or vertical, every other letter diganol or vertical, and many other methods. People say that this code predicts the apacolaps. When reserchers where reading though they made a matrix which showed these words close together "Tetrapod mass extinctions" "Patterns of Evolution" "Extinction by periodic comet showers 2012" "The Great Dying: New York" "The giant meteoritic impacts and paroxysmal eruptions that did not kill off the dinosaurs" & many more. Do You belive that these events will acour? Do you even belive in a bible code?

DBB*Launches nuclear warhead*.....boom boom there goes our little comet problem, carry on.

..Btw, id like to see some quotes from the bible that predicted the terrorist attacks, and the assination of Kennedy. They keep replaying this "The Bible Code" special on the History Channel, so if you want to see all of the predictions in the code, watch it - they show you the code.

But really if you think about it, the code is so incredibly long there's bound be coincidences like the part where the guy found "Al Gore", "almost win", "2000", or something like that. But they were not next to each other... a few pages apart with thousands of other words in between and they just assume those words are supposed to go together when in reality they don't know which words are supposed to go with which. There's so many words in there you could find anything you want in there if you had the time to search through it.

I bet that i could find lots of "secret codes" in any, say, Tom Clancy book [because they have a lot of words]. Interesting stuff, though.

Everything can be easily mistranslated into what the translator wants or thinks it might be. For all we know one of the sentences that say "Extinction by periodic comet showers 2012" could actually say "2012 bugs hit car windshields causing the species to go extinct." What if this code does not actually predict the future? What if its actually the very first word search in the world? Games have to start somewhere. After the 9/11 attacks, there were rumors/e-mails going around that said an ancient Greek philospher predicted this to happen. It actually turned out not be true, due to someone making up random crap. This can easily be true here by mistranslating the actual text for something else.

I have never heard of this bible matrix thing but the year 2012 has been the reckoning date for more than a while.

Many believe the apocalypse will occur on 2012 while others believe it will merely start a chain of events leading to it on 2012.

Nostradamus predicted an apocalyptic war to occur in 2012. So who knows.

But is it better to know the possible date of the world's demise or continue on in ignorance unaware?

I would have to choose ignorance for knowing of an approaching doom leads to worry and you can't enjoy life with worry. So ignorance really is bliss

I don't believe it. Why? Well, although the words in the Bible do not change from generation to generation (the texts that we use to get the Bible we have today), there are changes that are there. And they are changes in the form of letters. Spelling changes. If that is the case, exactly what text are you going to use in order to get these codes? Is one year's text more inspired by God than the other? Unless you can show me that this code isn't affected by these changes in spelling, I have serious doubts as to its authenticity.

This Bible code thing was just made by some nutty guy who wanted to get 15 minutes of fame. He took out a piece of paper that had Hebrew written all over it, pick out letters that made "Kennedy, Terror, etc." and then "concluded" that...

"The Bible has predicted everything that has happened in the world."

Even I believe in God and the Bible, but I don't believe in this "Bible Code". :rolleyes:

I read the book The Bible Code by Michael Drosnin. One thing I did find interesting is that the same code was run against other large works of literature, like Gone with the Wind, and the "predicted" events weren't listed. It also states that the Code doesn't predict the Future, it merely reveals one possible future. It's intriguing, that is for sure.

It is ironic how the Myan Calender abruptly ends in 2012 (The Myan calender was the most accurate calender developed in the world until modern times). And they found that in the so called "Bible Codes". I do not think the world is going to end, I just think it is funny that they find that text, but you could make any phrase in the "Bible Code" if you had the time to go fishing.

The Probability Of this being bull shit: 1 out of 5.3 million Skeptic Scientists When the authors used a randomization test to see how rarely the patterns they found might arise by chance alone they obtained a highly significant result, with the probability  $p=0.000016$ . Our referees were baffled: their prior beliefs made them think the Book of Genesis could not possibly contain meaningful references to modern-day individuals, yet when the authors carried out additional analyses and checks the effect persisted.

That is, the probability of getting the results they did was 16 out of one million or 1 out of 62,500. The authors state: "Randomization analysis shows that the effect is significant at the level of 0.00002 [and] the proximity of ELS's with related meanings in the Book of Genesis is not due to chance." Harold Gans, a former cryptologist at the US Defense Department, replicated the work of the Israeli team and agreed with their conclusion. Witztum later claimed that, according to one measure, the probability of getting these results by chance is 1 in 4 million. He has apparently changed his mind and now claims that the probability  $p = 0.00000019$  (1 out of 5.3 million).

As further evidence of the statistical significance of their results, the Israeli team analyzed the Hebrew version of the Book of Isaiah and the first 78,064 characters of a Hebrew translation of Tolstoy's War and Peace. They found many names in close proximity to birth or death dates, but the results were statistically insignificant. (The book of Genesis used in their study, the Koren version, has 78,064 characters.)

I find this all interesting. I kind of have read some of Nostradamus (sp) stuff, but never researched into it enough to find a decent translation. Im kind of curious as to what they predict happens from lets say tomorrow.....till "2012". Surely some of this may be true, but surely some of it may be not.

I guess well find out in 2012.....when I own you all! MWAHAAHA :twisted:

Eh .... I don't think it's true. 2000 was the big year for the end of the world - and we all know how that turned out. Come 2013 life will go on as normal.

Honestly NASA would know if there was any chance of us coming into contact with an asteroid/comet. I remember awhile back there was a semi-big deal about an asteroid which had a 1/*some huge number* chance of hitting us in 40 years or so. They then plotted its course and realized it will miss us - they'd certainly know about something in 2012.

I believe in God and the Bible, but I think the bible code is bullshit.

The Probability Of this being bull shit: 1 out of 5.3 million

Most of you take the side of which is most probable, remember the meteor in 2014 topic? u all said that it was not going to hit but when we talk about something with over 5.3 million going for this u still say it is not possible. I dont get that. This is a very high differential. 1/5,300,000. Ok here lets try something im guessing a number between one and 5.3 million. Guess it and this topic is bull shit guess the wrong number and its true. Good luck.

Here is some data from where i got the numbers out of.

Skeptic Scientists When the authors used a randomization test to see how rarely the patterns they found might arise by chance alone they obtained a highly significant result, with the probability  $p=0.000016$ . Our referees were baffled: their prior beliefs made them think the Book of Genesis could not possibly contain meaningful references to modern-day individuals, yet when the authors carried out additional analyses and checks the effect persisted.
