Nothing beats the Canadian Rockies eh? Those were taken near Canmore Alberta, by the time we got to the bigger ones near Lake Louise Alberta there were too many clouds to get any good shots of em Not enough snow on them, they should be totally white... But it beats what we have here!

Actually that Halo PC trainer is used for cheating (I remember how the icon looks) . . . I downloaded that exact trainer so that I could win Legendary and see the funny movie at the end. I don't know whether or not the trainer works for multiplayer, but it does give you a lot of different cheats EX. inf ammo, inf health, all guns, time stop, and other things. I admit that I cheated in single player on legendary to see the funny movie at the end, but I do not cheat online . . . I find it more fun not to cheat because when you do cheat there is no challenge at all and that gets really really boring after a while.

I didn't say I cheated online! It only works for 1.0 anyways. I use it for modding purposes.

You need to use StyleXP or Windows Blinds to get the new skins. The Windows XP system cannot allow the customisation to the extent of the programs can. You install the programs then download a skin that works with the program.

Aye, but when I play games/benchmark etc, I don't want half a ton of fluffy shit loaded in the background. That and I end up fucking up my installation and reinstalling often so getting it all pretty is pointless in the end
