Thanks to Senc for linking us to this in IRC:

http://www.datacraft.co.jp/takagism/index_e.html

It takes a while to load (it's in Japan), but once it's loaded there's no lag. See if you can escape.

This thing sure is taking over the internet rapidly. Anyway, I already read about it on another site/forum (www.evilplanet.com - shameless plug). I didn't managed to get out so far, but I haven't got much to do today, so...

It is indeed very puzzling. You have to look in every nook and cranny to find the necessary items to get out.

It was frustrating, but fun.

Hmm...the site is unreachabeable at the moment, and after a few refreshes it starts to load extremely slow. With that I mean it hasn't loaded it here after at least five minutes on a university connection. This thing surely spreads fast! :twisted:

Check the curtain a couple of times. The URL will be needed for later, as it holds a valuable piece of data.

A metal rod is required, which is between the head board and the mattress.

rm5248there's nothing at the URL. I even looked at the source and there was nothing.

If you're getting a 404, keep refreshing it.. DNS wasn't all that great, and the page did not even come up.

However, if you DO get a page (with a nice orange background) then everything you need is there.

CrimsonIf the safe had 3 numbers, the combo would be "404".

That would have actually been a hell of a lot more ingenious to do! People would continually think they can't solve the puzzle because they can't get to the damn page!.. I think it would take longer to make the connection.
