Yes you can, it's only a little program called ObjectDock, I find it really useful. The blurred thing is obviusly something that shouldn't fall into the wrong hands...

I made them! Renders were in Bryce 5, rest in Photoshop 7. It's the product of me getting bored on my days off work...

I've made like 4-5... All can be viewed here.

It only works on Xp and 2000 but its nice. Takes a while to set up though if you want a custom monitor like I use. There are predefined ones available also.

I just had to play around with it untill I got it how I wanted.

Well thank you both very much!   I do plan too, just been busy lately to make them. Soon though.
The last render I did for those (the chaos reigns wallpaper), it took a little more than four hours to render... On my day off that was rather boring to wait...   But thanks again!

CwazyapeWell, it wasn't meant to be an insult....

I'm just amazed someone would try to do that. :shocked:

Well when I see people trying to make their first website it's one of the most common errors when they want pictures on their site to link to some place on their own HD. But it's still funny.

Anyways, you first have to upload the picture to a website, like n00bstories. Then change the links to that images.
