Take a listen to it, then grab your copy of C&C95 (If you own it) and find a track that sounds like a cheesy 80s keyboard recording.

What you're hearing is Frank's C&C rendition of 80s music. This somehow found its way into the song Command & Conquer for Renegade. Listen to the melody of it, not the guitar, and you're hearing a redone version of that C&C 80s track.

Most people don't know that... Actually I think I'm like the only one who did.

For Hell March 2, listen to the menu music of Renegade Alert. That's Hell March 1.5. Hell March 2 incorporates its melody as the melodic side of the guitar.

At least they carried over something to RA2 from Red Alert, besides the two warring factions.

And you're the moron who had to post about it, too. This does have something to do with Renegade, y'know, that's why it's the Renegade general discussion and all.

I always thought they had a similar melody. Just didn't feel like posting about it.
BTW, have you ever heard the lost Renegade tracks called Great Shot Remix and Fight Win Prevail Remix?

Music has always been a large part of C&C. I hope Petroglyph realizes that when they assume the name brand.

And Titan, a little more candor please.
