I noticed some servers use the word: RolePlay in them. That does that mean you have to listen to 1 person and he tells the team what to do?

Roleplaying is essentially trying to act as if you're the character you're playing as.

Like say, you're a soldier back in the times of castles and all, you probably wouldn't know a darned thing about laser cannons, plasma rifles, orbital cannons, etc, so maybe normally you'd say

"Cool! Which game is that in?"

but when roleplaying you may say something like

"What is this gibberish you be talking about!? Is it black magic!? I'll be having none of that here!"

or another example: Normally if you see a kid on the street that's lost and you're a nice person, you may try to help the kid. If you're roleplaying an evil guy who likes to blow things up and sets things on fire, you'll probably want/need to pull out a flamethrower or grenade launcher instead.

To act a role of a character you make in a fantasy world, most likely medieval with dragons, orcs, undead, and elves, and whatnot.

Typical roleplaying greeting:
"Greetings and well met."
"Elo!"

you have to be a tard not to know what that is...
