alright, so i quote myself:

"If you want to catch people trying to get around your system, i'm the last person you should point your fingers at. You should be looking at people like spade AKA darthcide that claim to have started renegade with bones in their data folder. alright, thanks."

As i said, he CLAIMED to have done, i didn't say he did. All I said was, if you're trying to "catch" people "trying to get around" your system, you should look at people like him, instead of me.

C4Prox, have you considered that your computer might have a virus? Most viruses silently infect any exe file that you run. All we know is that you kept connecting to the RG network with a client that had changed code, we did the only thing we could since you have to admit it fits the profile of someone trying to hack.

If you are truly innocent, I suggest you scan your computer for viruses. If you dont have a virus scanner use the free online one: <http://housecall.trendmicro.com/>

If you find that you were infected let us know and we will remove the ban. Otherwise it stays at least until the RG network settles in and we have more time to invetigate whats going on with your client.

I don't exactly calling the RenGuard team names would be an action of someone who is innocent. Also, maybe you're trying to find out how you were banned so you could "fix" your problem to play Renegade. When really you are trying to see how it worked so you can get around it. And nobody likes to be called a cheater and have themselves embarassed in front of an entire community. 3 simple and quickly thought up reasons why you would be a cheater and defend urself.

With me saying that, I have no opinion on whether you are guilty or innocent. Just thought it was interesting you would bash the RenGuard team if you were innocent.

I actually happen to KNOW I have a virus. I tried to intercept it and cure it, but it's just not possible. It owns some of my exe files, but i'm still waiting to get my windows XP cd back so I can reformat my computer. So leave it at that, fine, I just want people to know I wouldn't wanna try to hack an anti cheat program when i'm a cheat hater...

I'm sure you would be pretty calm if you were trying to set up renguard to work. Getting help from IRC guys, and all of a sudden BAM you're banned. And you're talking to someone on msn thats giving you the IRC chat logs.

I kind of agree with c4prox... renguard comes out for a game that was NOT made by Blackhand studios or whatever, and if you guys f0ok up his game by not letting him play it sounds like you're playing WOL and banning ppl, not being a group to help keep cheaters away

You can run game2.exe to bypass renguard and play on non-renguard servers...of course your virus will then infect it as well (probably already infected). You need to kill the virii are we all aware that (no offense), renguard is pretty miserable and doesn't seem to stop much?

The server owners i have been in contact with tell me that it won't detect bh, final, and other cheats. I have been testing it myself in collusion with other owners, and all it seems to do is kick people for not having it. I guess that's one way to end cheating - don't let anyone on the server.

I don't want to kick up a flame or anything, and i am aware that a lot of hard work has been put into this, but...it doesn't stop bh and has little effect on final renegade, so i don't think i'll be using it. Maybe next version, perhaps? I look forward to seeing the next release.

I dont buy his story. Here is why:

1. All of the sudden he remembers he has a virus when it is mentioned.
2. I have had this virus and you can't play renegade when you have it without reinstalling and repatching everytime. The reason here being is it does infect exes and it alters Game.exe so it ceases to function.

Proof (Taken from my dads computer, I never reinstalled renegade after Game.exe was infected.)

<http://www.n00bstories.com/image.fetch.php?id=1282524598>

This may seem farfetched but I think he got the virus and put it on his computer to save himself.

Also doesnt he say he can't reinstall renegade and then says he will reformat and reinstall xp. How that fix anything because would you still not be able to reinstall renegade? Did I miss something?
